How Davi came so close

■ Challenger's aggressive campaign allowed him to seize on Karas' vulnerabilities

By PAUL WOLF

WHAT WOULD have happened if the 5th Monterey County supervisorial district picked its winners through some kind of Electoral College?

Were there winner-take-all battlegrounds, challenger Jeff Davi would have beaten incumbent 4th District Supervisor Sam Karas by a decisive margin in the Aug. 8 runoff. The reason: Davi outperformed Karas — albeit narrowly — in more locations.

Going to Davi were Monterey, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, Carmel Highlands, Carmel Highlands and Jacks Peak. On the other hand, Carmel, Pacific Grove, Big Sur and Carmel Woods went to Karas.

As most know by this time, Karas won by 12 in the popular vote count — 9,201 to 9,189 — the only result that matters.

Davi support was supposed to have been founded narrowly on the real estate and development interests, but it proved deeper and broader than anyone had cause initially to believe.

There is another striking poser: What if there had been no redistricting?

By all appearances, Davi would have won in Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman's old 5th District. After all, Pacific Grove was key terrain in determining an outcome favorable to the

AN OVERWHELMING sense of excitement and anticipation filled the Monterey County Board of Supervisor's chambers Tuesday morning while Sam Karas, Simon Salinas and Edith Johnsen were sworn in as new supervisors for the county's 1st, 4th and 5th districts.

Family, friends and constituents by the hundreds filled the chambers in Salinas, Aug. 10 to witness the supervisors take oaths to fulfill their responsibilities during the next four years.

Karas, who previously served two terms as supervisor for the 4th district, joyfully agreed to represent the 5th District after squeezing by with 12 votes in a neck-and-neck supervisorial race against Jeff Davi.

"It's a proud moment to again be elected," said Karas.

He congratulated Davi, who was in the audience, noting the recent campaign demonstrates that the democratic process does work.

"He did a good job," said Karas, adding, "Jeff, I'm sorry, but I'm glad I won."

Reflecting on his eight-and-a-half years as supervisor he said, "I have no shame about my work on the board."

He said his main goal will continue to be protecting and preserving the vast 5th

Campaign spending law gains momentum

By PAUL WOLF

A MOVEMENT is afoot to limit campaign spending in Carmel-by-the-Sea elections, but the issue may prove controversial.

As City Attorney Don Freeman has been directed to explore the legal possibilities for putting caps on campaign spending and donations, at least three Carmel City Council members appear serious about considering such legislation.

And the issue has captured the imagination of many Carmel residents.

"I think Carmel is too small a place for big-city politics," said Noel Van Bibber. "If someone can't get name-recognition in a town of one-square mile and 4,000 people, then they shouldn't be running for office."

Carmel Mayor Ken White agrees in principle with campaign finance reform, particularly at the state level, but he wants to do some fact-finding and opinion testing in the meantime.

"I want to hear what the citizens of Carmel feel about this issue," White said. "I know there are good arguments on either side."

'Level playing field'

Councilwoman Barbara Brooks took a more definite stand. "Yes, I am inclined to support it," she said. "I don't agree that we would be damaging anyone's right to campaign, but we would be leveling the playing field."

Campaign finance restrictions, Brooks said, "would allow us to focus on the issues and not the marketing (of candidates)."

But there may be far more to the issue than simply whether to pursue local campaign reform or to drop the idea, accord-

No evidence of arson involvement

Teen girl arrested, linked to crime spree

By SCOTT BREARTON
and SUSAN BECK

A 13-YEAR-OLD Carmel girl scheduled to attend Carmel High School this fall has been arrested for her alleged participation in a series of crimes that occurred during the time of the arson fire that destroyed part of the school's science wing June 13.

She was arrested and cited Tuesday, Aug. 10 for malicious mischief, theft of a vehicle in Carmel and setting fire to an automobile in Carmel Valley, according to Monterey County Sheriff Norman Hicks.

Sgt. Mike Brassfield said there is no clear evidence at this time that the former Carmel Middle School student was involved with the arson fire at the high school.

He declined to comment whether other youths are still being investigated.

The crime spree started June 13 with the high school arson and continued through the evening and the following week, according to an announcement from the sheriff's department.

CHS Principal Marie Ishida said she was aware of the investigation that led to the young girl's arrest.

"It's my understanding that the same names kept coming up," said Ishida. "However, this group of kids were not on our main list of possible suspects."

The three 17-year-old youths arrested July 20 in connection with the arson fire at the high school are expected to appear in court at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 25, according to Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Gary Meyer.

According to Meyer — one of the deputies assigned to juvenile court — the purpose of the first appearance is, like an arraignment, to advise the youths what crimes they are formally being charged with. They are expected to enter pleas on that date.

"I reviewed everything and am asking that we file charges in the case," Meyer

Carmel Valley's 'Chief Quail' takes long shots

He may not have time to play golf, but there's little else about life that doesn't suit Ed Haber

By SUSAN BECK

ONCE IN a while, Ed Haber would like to get in a game of golf.

While that doesn't seem like a huge request, especially for a man who is an owner of one of the most beautiful golf courses on the Monterey Peninsula, the chances of his getting in 18 holes are a long shot.

Haber, or Chief Quail as he is fondly referred to by a few, is the well-known president of Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley. He celebrated his 81st birthday last month and is as busy as the day he moved to the area just after World War II.

"I would like to play golf now and then," said Haber. "That's what I came down here for."

He initially visited the peninsula to compete in a golf tournament. It was during the Great Depression and he didn't have a dime. "Somehow, someone managed to get me in," said Haber. He remembers thinking how one day he would like to live here — in paradise.

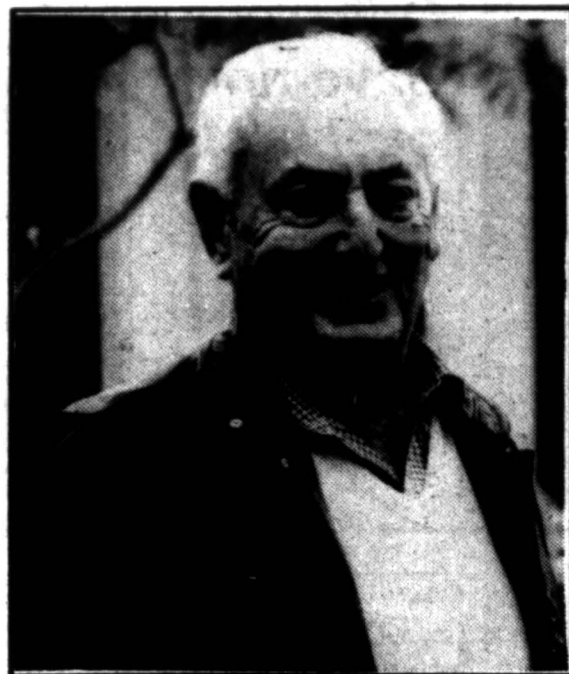

After the war, he took a chance and moved to Carmel Valley Village without a job. He quickly figured out what the village didn't have: a newspaper and a liquor store.

The one-sheet Carmel Valley News was created with baby-sitter and want ads for $1 each. Haber also established The Grapevine Liquor Store — which is still operating — with $5,000 and a partner.

It wasn't long before he gleaned $200 a month from the newspaper and an equal amount from the liquor store. But now he had a family. So he sold both entities and became an insurance salesman for the Equitable Life Insurance Co. It was there he learned about real estate, which provided the opportunities to fulfill a promise he made as a young man.

"The Depression was so horrible and severe," said Haber. "I made up my mind that was never going to happen to me or my kids."

And, it hasn't. After 10 years in the insurance business plus buying and selling his own homes, Haber knew a deal when he saw it.

"The Depression was so horrible and severe, I made up my mind that was never going to happen to me or my kids."

—Ed Haber

Charles Lindbergh's brother-in-law, Dwight Morrow, Jr., walked into Haber's insurance office in the 1960s. It was 10 years after Haber had mentioned on a tour of Morrow's dairy in Carmel Valley that he "sure would like to have something like this."

For $50,000 down, Haber could have Morrow's property. He got four other people to put up $10,000 each and they bought 250 acres of prime land in the sunbelt of the Monterey Peninsula.

Within a year, the group wanted to divide the property up into smaller pieces, said Haber.

"I had another idea," he said. "I wanted to build a golf course with houses around it. And I wanted to create open space, an idea I got from Samuel F. B. Morse, who created the scenic view concept in Del Monte Forest."

Haber rallied 25 people to put up enough money to build a private country club, 25-room motel and an 18-hole golf course.

The greatest compliment he ever had, said Haber, came from Morse. Apparently, Morse toured the project after it was completed. "He wrote me a letter and said, 'you certainly are doing it right.'"

Quail Lodge is now a resort hotel and a recipient of the Mobil Travel Guide 5-Star Award for 17 years. In addition, 600 acres acquired in the 1970s is now known as Quail Meadows, which is limited to 56 homesites, leaving 300 acres in perpetual open space.

"I did what I liked," said Haber. "I knew what I liked in golf. We didn't have an ocean, so I put in 10 lakes. I guess it's okay. No one has bought out."

Along the way, Haber married Terry Jones. She was an art teacher at Tularcitos Elementary School in the village, and they have been married 20 years.

"She coordinates everything at the lodge down to the smallest detail," said Haber. "We've had such a good marriage because we both work so much that we don't have time to argue."

Haber continues to work seven days a week, occasionally taking a Sunday off. But, he said, "they call me anyway."

He can't fit a game of golf into his schedule, but he has no trouble at all volunteering numerous hours to the Sheriff's Emergency Assistance Team, of which he is a co-captain.

"That's what I like to do the best now," said Haber. "For me, it isn't about money anymore."

Haber, along with several other local residents, formed the assistance team, which also has a special search and rescue team. They organized the emergency assistance team in response to the need for a central communication system between law enforcement agencies and fire departments in the area.

He said the team has been out eight times in the last two months. "It's not predictable," he noted. "I like the action."

Haber believes in staying active. He observed when people retire, they typically either get into community service work or start deteriorating. He admits, however, that his pace and motivation are not for everyone.

His four children have watched him through the years and none of them want to have their nose to the grindstone, said Haber. "I envy them sometimes," he said, "because they get to smell the roses. Somewhere between where I am and where they are is about right."

Assembly candidates bring diverse platforms

■ John Laird: Former Santa Cruz mayor seeks role as consensus-builder

By SCOTT BREARTON

DESCRIBING HIMSELF as a consensus-builder and problem-solver, Democratic candidate John Laird believes his ability to bring people together will take him to the November runoff election for the 27th Assembly District seat.

"I think I'd be the best person for the job because of my wide experience in the public and private sectors, and my ability to bring people together to solve problems," Laird said.

A former Santa Cruz mayor and council member, Laird, 43, founded the Santa Cruz County AIDS Project and was its executive director until June, when he resigned to campaign full-time for the Assembly seat.

Laird has focused his campaign on four issues he believes are key to the future of this district: Jobs and the economy, public education, state budget reform and ending special-interest influence in Sacramento.

According to Laird, the economy of the Monterey Bay is still in recession and will only get worse when the 7th Infantry leaves Fort Ord.

"Building on our strengths of tourism and agriculture," Laird said, "we must bring educational facilities into Fort Ord to replace the jobs that are leaving."

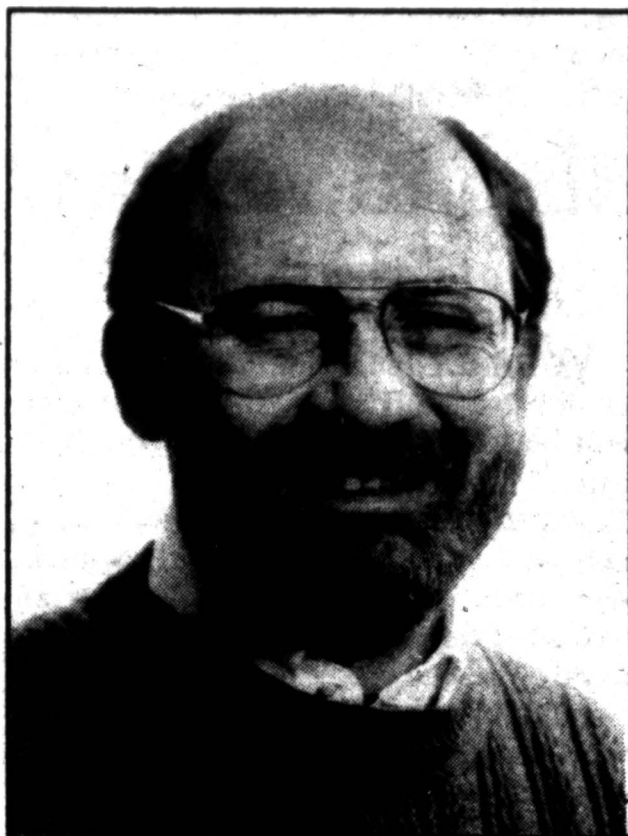

An opponent of the school choice (voucher) initiative, Laird said the measure would "turn the public education system into a second-class system for the poor."

'Fracturing society'

"Public education is the last place in our fracturing society where people deal with people different from themselves. I strongly oppose the voucher initiative."

Additionally, Laird said he favors a complete re-examination of the state budget.

"The state budget adopted this summer was a disaster for local government," he said. "We need a state budget that is balanced with statewide revenues, not the stealing of local property taxes."

"Taxpayers believe their existing tax dollars are not well-spent," Laird continued. "I support a complete review of all programs in the state budget."

Lobbyists' influence

Citing the Sacramento tobacco lobby as a prime example of special-interest influence, Laird said laws to protect employees from second-hand smoke in the workplace would have already been passed if not for the powerful lobby.

According to Laird, his Assembly campaign is going "very well," with more than 5,000 signatures from district supporters and 900 financial contributors.

Laird's endorsements include Monterey Councilwoman Ruth Vreeland, the California Teacher's Association, and the Service Employees International Union (Local 817), which represents employees of Monterey County and the City of Monterey.

"I am not a career politician," Laird noted.

"But I know how government works and how to improve it. I know how state government helps and hurts us, and I know what laws must be changed to allow us to maintain essential services and keep our neighborhoods desirable places to live."

■ Susanne Espinoza: Charges past leaders have not represented people's best interests

By SCOTT BREARTON

ENDING INEQUITIES in public salaries and income taxes are two goals Susanne Espinoza, Peace and Freedom Party candidate, has set for herself if elected to the 27th Assembly District.

"I feel the liberal Democrat establishment that has been charged with representing this district has not been representing the people's interests because they're tied in with big-money bureaucracy," said Espinoza, an unsuccessful candidate for state Senate last year.

Espinoza claims the shift in property taxes from the counties to the state was supported by Democratic representatives in Sacramento, and now its effects are beginning to be felt locally, with the closure of Santa Cruz County libraries and cutbacks in county services.

"People have to begin standing up, or else more drastic moves are in store," Espinoza said.

Espinoza, 51, is a graduate of the University of California at Santa Cruz and is currently a substitute teacher for the Pajaro Valley Unified School District. Her campaign is centered on three key issues: supporting the statewide county tax revolt, closing tax loopholes for corporations and cutting salaries of high-paid public employees.

"We need to close tax loopholes for rich and big corporations who are getting four billion dollars in tax write-offs annually in California," Espinoza declared. "That revenue should be used for providing a jobs program."

State-sanctioned jobs program

Espinoza said a state-sanctioned jobs program could put construction companies to work building public homeless shelters and childcare centers.

"This would get the economy moving," Espinoza said. "It's something that's very needed... a very common sense solution."

Regarding salary cuts for public employees, Espinoza made it clear that she doesn't want working class people to take another hit.

SUSANNE ESPINOZA

"It would be targeted at those earning a $75,000 yearly salary, giving them a 5 percent cut, and an additional one-half percent cut per thousand (over $75,000)," Espinoza said. "That would bring their salaries down to $71,250. I don't think that's unreasonable. The half-percent per thousand over $75,000 would reduce a $100,000 salary per year to $82,500."

"This would raise big revenue and restore the cuts that working class people took last year," she added. "I think people want cuts at the top."

Additionally, Espinoza favors hiring more teachers, relaxing immigration laws, restoring welfare cuts and developing an "agro-ecology" program (studying sustainable agricultural methods) through the University of California for Fort Ord reuse.

"An ordinary person - such as myself - is going to be more able to deal with the present and future problems in the state," Espinoza concluded. "The reason that we've gotten into the state crisis we're in now is due to 'Demopublican' (two-party) bureaucracy."

Next week: The Pine Cone profiles Democrat Gary Patton and Republican Susan Whitman.

■ Jerome McCready: Perennial candidate desires to put respect back in government

By SCOTT BREARTON

JEROME MCCREADY has become a familiar name in local elections lately.

The American Independent Party candidate for the 27th Assembly District was his party's candidate for governor in 1990, U.S. Senate last year and Congress earlier this year. While McCready has been unsuccessful in being elected thus far, his message remains unchanged:

JEROME MCCREADY

"I run for all the offices, just to try to put respect back into government," McCready said. "The ones in there now are politicians. That's all they've ever done and all they know how to do."

"I believe the only way we're going to get honest representation is to elect someone who is in the business field right now and a taxpayer," noted McCready. "The only thing politicians understand is tax-and-spend, and it doesn't matter which party they're in."

While the 44-year-old Castroville resident and business owner has been told his chances of winning any election as an independent candidate are slim to none, McCready is not discouraged.

'Wake up'

"I believe that people have to wake up to the fact that neither party is doing any good for them," he said, noting the first thing he'd do in Sacramento if elected would be "to find out what Mr. Farr has done up there and straighten that out."

A proponent of the school-choice initiative, McCready said he supports it because he doesn't think it will hurt public education. In fact, he believes it will force public schools to "teach the three R's" and actually improve the quality of education they offer.

According to McCready, the state is claiming to take local taxes from county government to fund public education: "They may claim they're going to give it right back to us here in the districts, but that's just not true. They're going to use it somewhere else."

"When we voted in Proposition 13, we limited the counties in how much they can tax us on our property," said McCready. "Now the state wants to take that money and use it for their purposes, thus leaving the counties with no way of raising the money themselves."

Additionally, McCready said water is a key issue in his campaign.

"We have no drinking water," McCready said. "We need dams just for irrigation purposes, to replenish our aquifers. Desalination is actually the best choice for drinking water. I don't believe we're going to stop saltwater intrusion."

When asked about his endorsements, McCready replied, "I'm not endorsed by anyone. The only ones who really want to listen to me are those who want common sense back in our government. That doesn't include all the people with big bucks."

Saturday MPC forum to feature candidates

ALL NINE candidates for the 27th Assembly District are expected to appear at a town hall meeting Saturday, Aug. 14, at Monterey Peninsula College.

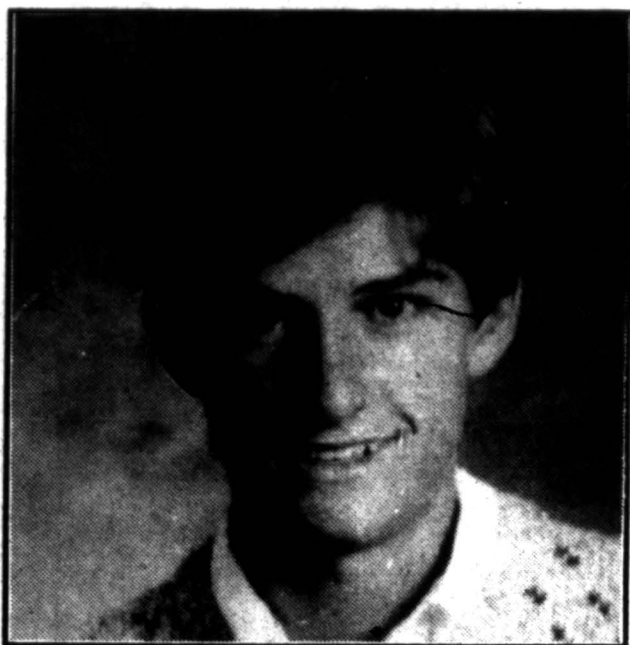

The "Meet the Candidates" forum represents the first opportunity for Monterey Peninsula voters to see all candidates square off on key issues in the 27th District prior to the Aug. 31 election.

The event is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP/VOTE) and will be moderated by the Monterey League of Women Voters.

The event will be held from 10 a.m. to noon in Room M-1 at MPC. The college is located at 980 Fremont Blvd. in Monterey. Ample parking is available.

In addition, the Regional Alliance for Progressive Policy is planning to host a 27th Assembly District candidates' forum at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 19. The forum will be held at Carpenters' Union Hall, located at 778 Hawthorne St. in Monterey.

Leads sought in disappearance of 20-year-old resident

NORMAN BASIL PAPPAS

CARMEL POLICE are seeking leads in a missing person case which centered on Norman Basil Pappas, 20-year-old resident of the city.

The missing person report was filed by the man's mother, according to Detective Sgt. Warren (Pete) Poltras.

"His mother described him as somewhat despondent," Poltras said. "There's some reason to believe he may have boarded a bus to San Francisco. We ask anyone having information on Norman Basil Pappas and his present whereabouts to call us right away (624-6403)."

Pappas was last seen at 8:30 a.m. July 26, Poltras said, when his mother dropped him off at the Naval Postgraduate School where he had a parttime job.

"He didn't show up on the job that day," the detective added. "Nor did he show up for a class at Monterey Peninsula College later the same day."

Police have issued a be-on-the-look-out bulletin. "We hope that someone out there might be able to help us pick up the trail," Poltras said.

BB gun vandals stir residents' ire

By JOHN DETRO

WEEKLY JOURNALISM makes room for this truth: The big city's minor incident can be the small town's source of fear.

Or put the matter another way. Lawmen who work intimately with a small population — like Carmel's — have an expanded view of what qualifies as urgent news.

So it was that Detective Sgt. Warren (Pete) Poltras of the Carmel Police Department asked your Pine Cone to address "the vandals who have been damaging homes and causing anger throughout the residential area."

Over the past 30 days, Poltras said, the "unknown parties have used a BB gun to shoot at windows of five different dwellings. All corners of the city have been involved."

In almost all cases, he added, "the windows required replacement. No one has been hurt, but homeowners are upset and I think you'll agree we need to stop this stuff as soon as possible. A copper BB was found inside one of the houses."

The working assumption: The same individuals have been involved in the separate incidents. "There's no way to say for sure," Poltras went on, "but past experience tends to indicate juveniles. The act itself is inherently juvenile."

Basically, Poltras said, "these are being seen by us as random acts. What we've got is windows with holes shot through them, and no suspects."

The detective asked citizens to become a neighborhood information network.

"If you see anything suspicious," he said, "please call us right away (624-6403). If you see a couple of kids walking around with a BB gun, please call. Immediately."

In marijuana trafficking case

Carmel Highlands woman forfeits $809,310 to state

By SCOTT BREARTON

AN ALLEGED drug dealer from Carmel Highlands whose fund forfeiture set a near record for Monterey County, faces arraignment in Municipal Court on Aug. 18.

The suspect, Roberta Jean Haertel,

38, of 150 Oak Way, was arrested Tuesday, Aug. 3 on Laureles Grade near Jeanette Road for allegedly possessing and transporting marijuana for sale. In a settlement reached out of court, Haertel agreed Aug. 6 to forfeit $809,310 to the state - the second-largest forfeiture of drug money in county history.

Following questioning, Haertel was booked into county jail on a number of drug-related charges, according to a Monterey County Sheriff's report. Among the charges were possession of marijuana for sale, transportation and sales of marijuana, possession of a sawed-off shotgun and possession of dangerous drugs. She was released on a $20,500 bond.

Haertel's arrest concluded a six-week investigation by authorities who charge she dealt and distributed marijuana on the Monterey Peninsula.

Sheriff's investigators served search warrants and seizure orders Aug. 2 through Aug. 5 at nine different locations throughout the peninsula, including Haertel's home, another residence in Carmel Valley, two Carmel banks, two Monterey banks and storage facilities in Monterey and Del Rey Oaks.

More than six pounds of high-grade sinsemilla marijuana with a street value of approximately $50,000 were seized, along with $775,000 in cash from six different safe deposit boxes - including $350,000 from three different boxes at two Carmel banks.

Sheriff's deputies also seized $12,000 cash that was in Haertel's purse at the time of the arrest.

In addition, five certificates of deposit valued at $37,381 were seized from a Monterey bank.

Haertel was allowed to keep one certificate of deposit worth nearly $15,000 and her 1985 Toyota sedan. A savings account at Coast Federal was returned to Haertel's attorney for legal fees.

"It's our position that all the money seized, even those monies that were returned to her, were from the sale of marijuana," said Deputy District Attorney Joseph Buckalew. "But in an effort to settle the case early, and to avoid the expense and time required to put on a trial, that money was returned."

Computer equipment target of burglars at Stevenson School

THE OFFICE of Greg Foster, Academic Dean at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, was struck this week by burglars who snatched computer equipment valued at $1,700.

According to Foster, the burglary occurred between the hours of 5 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 4, and 9 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 5. His office is located in the school's library building.

"There is a pretty broad access (to the building)," Foster said. "Access to my office is very limited, but apparently it was not completely secure."

Foster said he was amazed the burglars chose to take the five-year-old Apple Macintosh Classic computer, hard-drive and printer from his office when much more modern equipment was located elsewhere in the building.

"It kind of puzzled me because they could have gotten better stuff than that," Foster remarked, indicating he was more upset at losing nine years of records and documents than the equipment itself.

Monterey County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Mike Brassfield said there are no signs of forced entry and no suspects in the case.

Fire department to cover inspections, despite position loss

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE wake of one of the most painful cuts in the 1993-94 budget, the city has placed the duties of the former fire prevention officer in the hands of the remaining nine-person Carmel Fire Department.

Those who operate Carmel's 800 or so businesses "can expect to see a few new faces out there," said Fire Chief Bill Hill. I hope they will forgive the engine on the street, and also realize that if they get a call, they will respond. They will have to reschedule the inspection."

Carmel businesses have been receiving on-site inspections once every other year. In addition, on off-years they are asked to participate in mail-in self-inspections. Despite the loss of the fire prevention specialist, the basic schedule will remain the same, according to Hill.

Both Hill and City Administrator Jere Kersnar acknowledge that staff cuts of necessity result in some kind of reduction in service levels and in time available for equipment maintenance and training.

"We inevitably will have a slightly slower turnaround when it comes to planned checks and special inspections," Hill said.

But Hill and Kersnar say the fire department's fundamental level of preparedness will not be compromised. "These companies will be carrying radios, so they can respond just as quickly in the event of an emergency," said Kersnar.

The fire prevention specialist was Art Black, whose job was a casualty of city staff cuts for the second year in a row. Black's key duties will be under the charge of Assistant Fire Chief John Willett.

Training in inspections will be expanded, and the department's full-time clerk will assume the considerable paperwork associated with inspections, according to Hill.

"This is a very specialized part of our overall service," said Hill. "But we are trying to do this in as straight forward a fashion as possible."

Engines in the road

Hill and Kersnar are asking residents to tolerate the "inconvenience" of a bulky engine on downtown streets. The rig is not necessary for the inspections, but it must be on hand in case of calls.

Although Kersnar insisted the basic fire suppression and prevention functions will be maintained at adequate levels, he added, "You can't lose 10 percent of your (fire) staff, and not have an impact in some way."

CARMEL WOMEN LEND A HELPING HAND TO THOSE IN NEED

THE MISSOURI River reaches a mind-boggling point in Cedar City, Mo.

Local Red Cross workers tell heart-wrenching flood tales

By MITCH ARNESEN

TWO CARMEL Red Cross volunteers have just returned from Jefferson City, Mo., where they distributed food and water and came to the aid of those fighting the rising waters of the Missouri River.

As part of a team of more than 500 disaster-relief workers from across the country, Dani Marr and Barbara Windham, worked from sunrise until past sunset, driving a relief vehicle to help flood victims.

The two women, who are both retired, described what they witnessed and experienced as heart-wrenching and profound.

"We stood with people, shoulder to shoulder, when the river was cresting, and watched their homes get flooded and sent floating down the river," said Marr. "There was an overwhelming sense of loss, of despair and hopelessness."

No hope

Initially, Marr said, people were hopeful that they could stop the flooding and hold their own against nature. But as the days passed and the water rose, they realized there was nothing they could do to save their homes and possessions.

As the sandbags broke and the flooding took over, the adrenalin stopped and shock set in.

"One woman was sitting on the end of a pickup truck in total despair," recounted Windham. "She lost her sister two months before. Now, her home, her furnishings, everything was gone. Her teenage daughter couldn't talk — she was in shock."

How would they start over? And how could they understand what had happened?

Many people explained the disaster as Mother Nature taking revenge. They pronounced that it was the over-building and destruction of trees along the river basin that were the divine cause of the flood.

The blank, stunned looks contrasted with Windham's last impression: people actively caring for one another.

She recalled countless instances of people working tirelessly with the sandbaggers and homeowners in

More local volunteers report to flood areas

TWO RED Cross volunteers, Kay Grant of Cachagua and Nancy Pettet from Carmel Valley, are in Des Moines, Iowa for a three-week assignment in response to the flood disaster in the midwest.

Both women will serve as Mass Care Technicians. Grant has served the Red Cross for more than 30 years, starting as a Grey Lady and now as a disaster worker. In September 1992, she went to Homestead, Fla. to work at the Harris Tent City for 22 days in response to Hurricane Andrew. This is Pettet's first assignment.

CHS grad looks forward to life after baseball

By DOUG THOMPSON

NOT EVEN the allure of a pennant race piques Pete O'Brien's interest at this point.

The 35-year-old Carmel High School graduate is looking forward to life after baseball. For O'Brien, that came a few months sooner than expected when the Seattle Mariners — the third, and likely, last team of his 11-year major league career — released him three weeks ago.

While at least two major league teams in the midst of a pennant race have cast an eye toward picking up O'Brien for the stretch run, the first baseman/designated hitter is emotionally — if not physically — ready for retirement.

"I'm done," O'Brien said recently in a telephone interview from his home in Seattle. "The World Series is not all that important to me now."

Even if O'Brien had finished the season with Seattle, he announced in March that the 1993 campaign was to be his last. So even if the Chicago White Sox or Baltimore Orioles should beckon the services of O'Brien, as has been rumored, he is likely to decline the offer even though he has never played on a team seriously involved in a chase for the pennant.

Although the Mariners are hovering around the .500 mark, they still are in the hunt for first place even though the White Sox have given hints at pulling away from the pack.

"The Mariners are still fully confident they'll win the American League West," O'Brien said. "And I guess they'll win it without me."

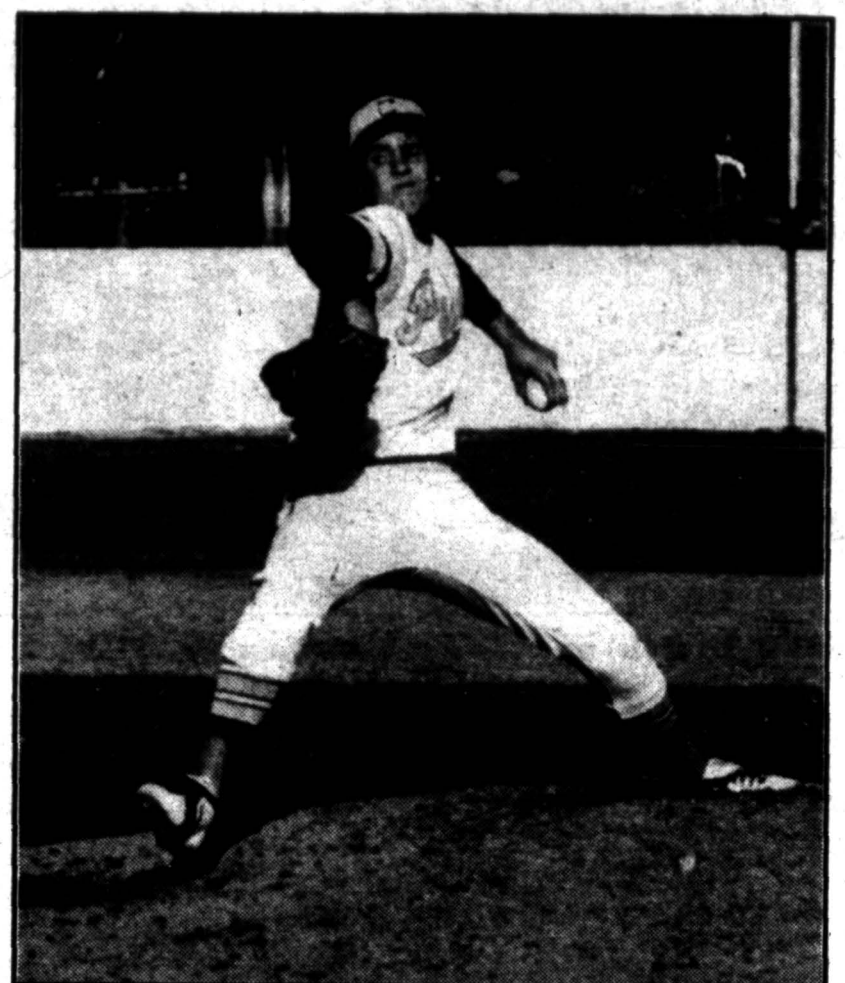

"Lou (Piniella, Mariners manager) is absolutely convinced that the young kids can perform in a pennant race. And, if he's convinced they can play, he's willing to take that chance."

Since O'Brien's role with the Mariners changed from being an everyday first baseman to an occasional appearance as a designated hitter or pinch hitter, the bang started to leave his bat and the fire began to leave his belly.

"When you're not playing every day," said O'Brien, "you begin to shut it down. You don't know how to prepare. When I was playing every day, I knew I had to be prepared."

PETE O'BRIEN enjoyed six successful seasons as a member of the Texas Rangers.

BEFORE HIS arm went dead, Pete O'Brien had the look of a pitcher as a junior at Carmel High.

O'Brien's numbers bear out the fact that a part-time role didn't suit him. Though he enjoyed a solid start to his season, O'Brien, when released, was batting .257 with seven home runs and just 27 RBI in 210 at bats. During the course of his career — six plus seasons with Texas, one with Cleveland and three and a half with Seattle — O'Brien belted 169 home runs, knocked in 736 runs while hitting for a .261 average.

Even for someone who was averaging $1.9 million a season the last four years, the game can become a grind.

"I'm really looking forward to life after baseball," O'Brien said. "I'm done with the traveling."

The youngest of seven children, O'Brien now has his own family. On Aug. 2, he and his wife, Donna, packed up their four children and moved from Seattle back to Arlington, Texas, where the O'Brien family will make their permanent home. Considering the oldest of O'Brien's four children is just five years old, the 1976 CHS graduate will have plenty to keep him busy.

"I just don't want to be away from the kids anymore. I want to give them as much stability as I was given as a kid."

For the first time since 1979 when he broke into the Texas Rangers' organization, playing in Sarasota, Fla., O'Brien will become a fan and not a player as summer gives way to the fall.

O'Brien's departure a sad business decision for Seattle

By BOB FINNIGAN
The Seattle Times

NEW YORK — Across the Mariner clubhouse, Ken Griffey saw teammate Pete O'Brien, still in street clothes, giving and getting sincere hugs and well wishes from others by now wearing their uniforms.

"What's going on?" Griffey asked, to be told O'Brien had been released to make room for Edgar Martinez in his return from the disabled list.

"Noooo," The Kid said softly, surprise and more than a bit of pain coming over his face.

"That's baseball," his father said. "It's a business. I should know. I got released, too."

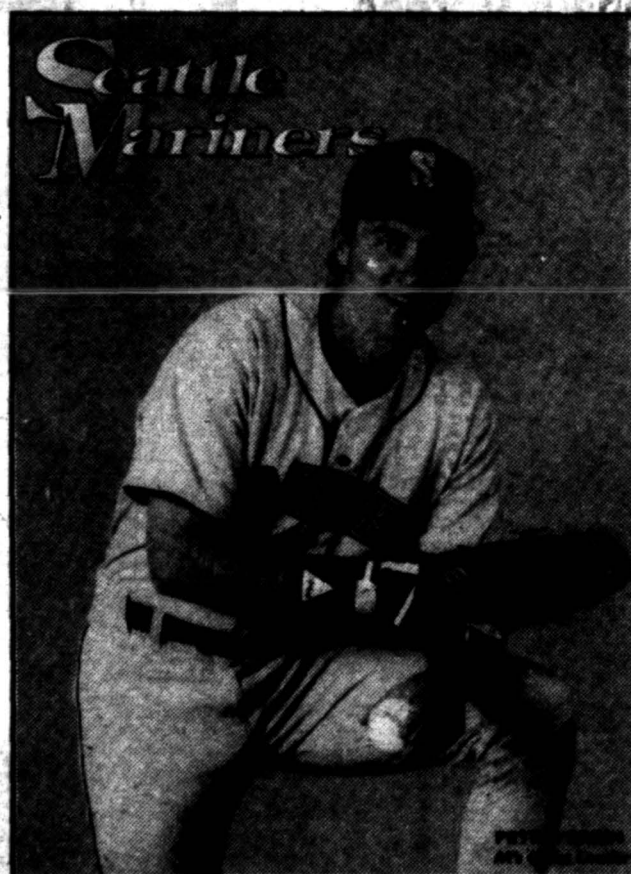

But Junior remained quiet. He and Pete O'Brien, who brought class and craft at first base to the Seattle club for more than 3 1/2 years, had a relationship Griffey has only recently learned to appreciate. The two had several long talks about playing hard, talks that the youngster did not always want to hear.

"Pete taught me a lot about being a professional, about coming to play every day," Griffey said. "He showed me a lot about handling myself, on and off the field. I would see him with his family after games. No matter how the game went he treated them so right."

"He's a good man and I'll miss him... we'll miss him. But we'll see him in Texas."

The Mariners may also see him next spring in camp. Giving O'Brien the news that the retirement he had announced earlier this year had been moved up from the end of the season, Manager Lou Piniella invited him to camp as an instructor. "He's a first-class person and player," he said. "Just the kind of man you want working with your young players."

O'Brien thought he had avoided the sadness entwined in leaving a lifetime in pro ball and a big-league career of nearly 11 years. But after an hour of goodbyes, hugs, handshakes and a long, huddled discussion with Dave Valle, the team went out for batting practice and their former designated hitter was alone in the clubhouse with tears in his eyes.

"This is tougher than I thought it was going to be," he said. "I was ready to leave the career and all, but it's not easy to leave the boys on the team."

A door closes, a door opens. "It's really a bittersweet thing," O'Brien said. "I'm looking forward, really, to life after baseball. There's so much to explore and experience. But that doesn't make it any easier to leave my teammates."

In critical terms, only in 1991 did O'Brien fill the promise he brought to Seattle as a free agent, hitting 17 homers and driving in 88 runs.

"My production in Seattle obviously was not what I would have liked," he said.

"I'd like to have put up better numbers, but you do the best you can."

O'Brien tried humor, joking about a farewell tour and getting "a boat and Cadillac in Boston." But mostly he was himself, speaking from the heart.

"I've never got caught up in the right way to go out," he said. "I think the right way is the way I did it. I told Lou weeks ago I'd stay as long as he could use me and when it was time to go, it was time. I see the effort Lou puts into a game and I have no problem at all with his decision."

O'Brien's time with the Mariners spanned cataclysmic changes in the franchise, ending amid an apparent change of fortunes on and off the field.

"I've enjoyed my four years with the Mariners tremendously," he said. "It was a time of stretching and growing. I see what Lou is building here, turning around a losing tradition. I've been with three teams going through that turnaround and it's difficult, and it will be fun to watch the Mariners do it. And they will do it ...

"In fact, I think I'll go into the Hall of Fame as a Mariner."

Try as he might, O'Brien couldn't leave them laughing.

"We grew to be like brothers, enduring similar struggles," Valle said. "I'll miss him."

No one will miss him more than Mike Blowers, the young infielder who had grown close to O'Brien this year.

"Pete is such a good man, and he helped me so much," he said. "Time goes on, but you hate to see it pass like this."

Campaign to save KBOQ intensifies

Local fans of classical music station unite, support mailer

By JOHN DETRO

LEADERS OF this area's concert music community are hoping that a mail campaign will help preserve the classical format at KBOQ Radio.

Their move — a mailer urging rapid action — came amidst strong rumors that the outlet will undergo a format change under new ownership and that current on-air personnel might start resigning.

Henry Broadcasting of San Francisco made an acceptable purchase offer to Model Associates last month. The Federal Communications Commission has scheduled a review of the ownership transfer for the back half of September.

Henry Broadcasting owns KDON Radio — a fact which may have inspired statements by usually reliable sources that a format change looms.

Announcement pledged

"We have made no statement on that (format) matter," Henry controller Caroline Erwin told The Pine Cone from her San Francisco office. "When a decision has been made, we will announce it to the media. Right now — no comment."

Erwin also said KBOQ has had "no quitters — no resignations" by present staff at the Monterey-based station.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

We get letters

Q. I LIVE with an adorable five-year-old Dachshund who constantly begs for treats. It's impossible to say no when she sits up and patiently waits for a snack. She's gained a few pounds and I've heard it's especially bad for dachshunds to be overweight, so what can I do?

A. For starters, stop rewarding her with food. It's true that dogs with long, low backs are most likely to develop back problems. Dachshunds are most prone to disc disease and Beagles, Poodles, Lhasas, Shih Tzu and other low-slung breeds seem to have a greater incidence.

Keeping your dog at a proper weight and in good physical condition will help immensely. It would be a good idea to pay a visit to your veterinarian so that you can discuss her diet and exercise program. Follow them carefully and I'm sure you will be very happy with the results.

Who will care for me?

Texas A & M University has recently opened a home-like facility designed to care for dogs and cats who owners have passed on.

After years of planning and fund raising, the center was dedicated this spring. The 5,000-square foot building includes a living room/playroom and sleeping rooms for the animals, offices, grooming and treatment areas, a kitchen, laundry facilities and quarters for a veterinary student. Individual diets and comfortable surroundings with sofas, chairs and specially designed window seats provide "residents" with a feeling of home.

Wallpaper and artwork adorn the walls. A sophisticated air-exchange system will take care of odors and help control dander and parasites. Children and adults from the community have already volunteered to visit and play with the animals.

However, this program is not solely dedicated to creating a country club atmosphere for orphaned pets. It is a serious endeavor from a research point of view that will teach about the bonds animals form with each other and their new human companions, and how an animal's age and previous life experience affect this behavior.

The center can accommodate approximately 25 animals and although 30 have been enrolled, none have been placed in the center as yet. The price tag of $25,000, representing an endowment to the college, is admittedly high. The interest on the money is used to care for the animal, and when it dies, the fund is transferred to a program of the donor's choice. According to the director of the program, most of the people who have enrolled their pets would probably have made the gift in any event, and now they have ensured their pet's continuing care as well.

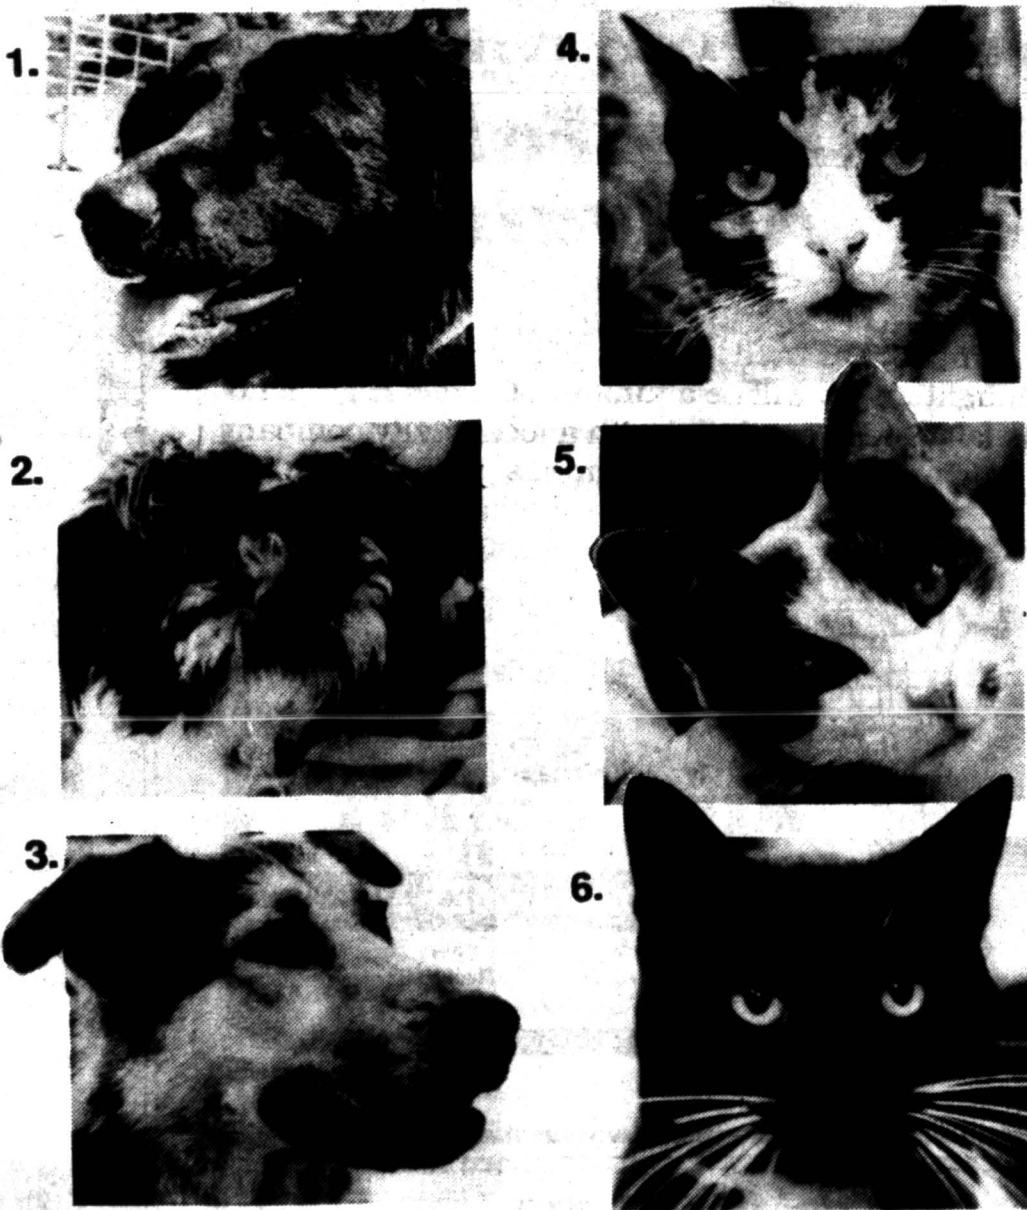

That's all for this week. See you next time!

PAUL HAZDOVAC

Paul Hazdovac receives AT&T volunteer award

Clint's absence 'disappointing'

By SUSAN BECK

PAUL HAZDOVAC is a man of his word.

In the mid-1940s, Hazdovac was a member of the Monterey Elks Lodge, which agreed to be the local backer for Bing Crosby's golf tournament previously held in Southern California.

"I voted to back it," said Hazdovac. "I've kept my commitment."

Hazdovac, a retired plumber and 53-year resident of Carmel, received the "Spirit of Volunteerism" Award from the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am organization, for 20 years of service, Aug. 2, at The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

"The success of the volunteerism is because of Lou Russo," Hazdovac said of the executive director of the Pro-Am. "He keeps the event on an even keel. He keeps everyone happy."

Reflecting back to the night the Elks Lodge members voted to support Crosby's tournament he said, "No one on that night ever dreamed the Pro-Am tournament would be for golf what the Rose Bowl is to football."

In 1947, he sold his first Crosby Pro-Am golf tournament program on the 14th fairway of Pebble Beach to Clyde Klaumann, former chief of police for Carmel.

When AT&T took over the tournament, Hazdovac was assigned to the communications division with Dick Searle. He was responsible for setting up and taking down the Professional Golf Association's official scoreboard, which he has done for the past 20 years.

CUSD board seat attracts quartet; Hightower, Pinney seek re-election

By SCOTT BREARTON

THREE CARMEL parents filed statements Tuesday indicating their candidacy for seats on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

Jim Kistenmacher, Ray Burch and Ginger Lum - all Carmel residents - announced this week they would seek election to the two-year term currently held by CUSD board member Daniel Hightower. The three candidates officially filed their candidates' statements Tuesday, one day before the filing deadline.

In addition, Annette T.P. Yee Steck, an investment banker, had filed for the two-year seat at Pine Cone deadline. Yee Steck could not be reached for comment.

Hightower will vacate his two-year seat and seek a four-year term, hoping to replace CUSD board member Patricia Herro, who announced July 12 she would not seek re-election after nine years on the board.

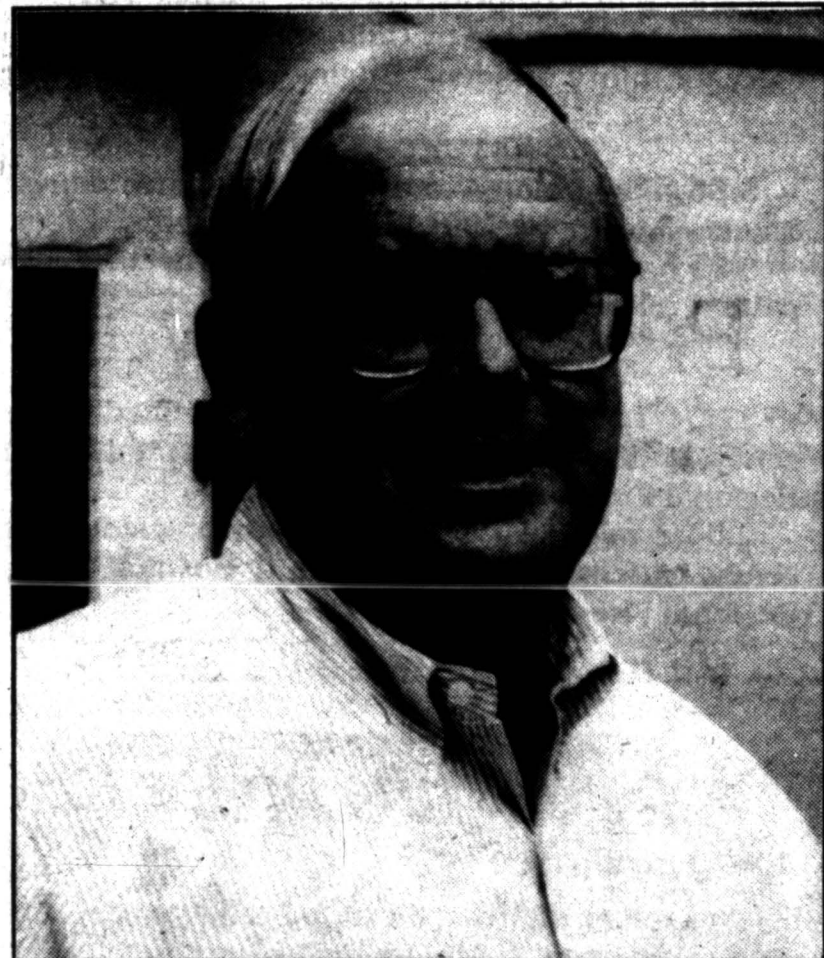

Hightower, an interim board member sworn in Feb. 25, replaced Hilton Bialek, who served the district for more than 15 years until his resignation last January.

Meanwhile, CUSD President and uncontested incumbent board member Frank Pinney will seek re-election to retain his seat for another four-year term.

Known for involvement

Kistenmacher, 50 is a local businessman known for his involvement with Carmel's public schools. He currently serves as chairman of the district's School Facilities Task Force, president of Carmel High School Athletic Boosters and a member of the district's Health Advisory Committee.

Additionally, Kistenmacher is a founding member of Community Against Substance Abuse, a local group dedicated to promoting a drug-free environment.

"I have a vested interest in the welfare of the district," said Kistenmacher, who has two children attending CHS this fall.

Kistenmacher said he is concerned about the rising cost of health insurance for district employees.

"An alternative program has got to be found that will reduce the enormous liability on the district," he said.

Obtaining additional financing to address the district's long- and short-term facilities needs is another problem Kistenmacher plans on tackling if elected.

"I think my experience illustrates a definite commitment to the young people of our school district," Kistenmacher said. "Now I'd like to take it one step further."

Adding a dimension

"I want to serve and I'm not out there to make any waves," said Burch, a 42-year-old businessman.

As parents, Burch and his wife have raised two children, a nephew and five foster children. He has been a permanent Carmel resident for two years and has lived in the area on a part-time basis since 1981.

"Most of them (foster children) came from non-traditional families, which represent a significant number of our students today," he said.

Burch noted that while he thinks the current board is outstanding, he thinks he can add a dimension to the board that isn't there now.

"I am a successful businessman who did not graduate from college. Just as 60 percent of Carmel High students will be," Burch said. "I feel that we need to make sure we're making proper educational alternatives available to those students who are not going on to college."

Additionally, Burch said the board needs to address drug and alcohol problems "a little more aggressively."

GINGER LUM

Initially hesitant

Lum, 50, has lived in Carmel for three years and has a daughter who will be a junior at Carmel High School this fall. She is employed with a local realty company.

Originally from Hawaii, Lum was president of a local PTA, trustee on a church board, chairman of a fundraising campaign for a private school, and was appointed to the Ethics Commission of Honolulu by the mayor of that city.

Lum said she was hesitant about running for the school board initially because she is somewhat unknown in the community.

"I just want to do my part to help," she said.

Concerned that students' views are not represented on the board as well as they should be, Lum said will do what she can to reverse that trend and boost student morale whenever possible.

"I seem to have good rapport with kids," Lum said. "I've been a successful single parent and want to help with other kids if I can."

Both Burch and Lum said they were seeking the two-year term because they felt it was a good way to get acquainted with serving on the board and they didn't want to compete for the incumbents' seats.

Voters will decide who will serve on the board at the polls on Nov. 2.

Supporters line up for KBOQ

As a return address, the high-quality mailer listed Dr.
John Anderson of Monterey Peninsula College Music Department. "This mailing was funded by private contributions," the document stressed.

Some 2,000 copies have been distributed through the mail and concert producers dealing with audiences directly, Anderson said Monday afternoon.

The mailer urged recipients to "write and call" Charlton Buckley of Henry Broadcasting and express their desire that the current format and personnel be maintained.

"Time is of the essence," the mailer said. "Changes at KBOQ are already under way, and further changes could happen without notice."

And: "For over 10 years, KBOQ has been broadcasting fine classical music (and) its familiar on-the-air hosts have become active participants in the cultural life of our community. Now all that could be lost."

Saying that Henry Broadcasting "has expressed a willingness to receive public opinion," the mailer included space wherein interested parties could tell Buckley their feelings about KBOQ before mailing on the whole.

Names appearing on the document in support with Anderson of the classical format: Cheryl Anderson
(Cabrillo College Music Department), Dr. Vahe Aslanian
(Camerata Singers of Monterey County), Lyn and Renee
Bronson (Keyboard Artist Series), Dr. Carl Christensen
(Hartnell College Music Department), Dave and Margaret Dally (Monterey String Quartet), Nancy Doolittle (Carmel Music Society), Dr. Sal Ferrantelli (MPC Music Department).

Joan Fontaine (actress), Barney Hulse (Monterey Peninsula Choral Society), Clifton Hart (chairman for Mozart Society), Reg Huston (Youth Music Monterey),
Clark Suttle (Monterey County Symphony), Beremis
Tomlinson (Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula).

Burkleo claims Division 1; election to settle ward 2

AN ELECTION will be held in November to pick a peninsula water director for the new Division 2, but lone candidate Darlene Burkleo will be appointed as Division 1 representative.

The Divisions 1 and 2 will be first among the five newly carved Monterey Peninsula Water Management District voter wards to choose directors. Up to this point, candidates have run in at-large contests.

Division 1 — which includes part of Seaside, Sand City, Del Rey Oaks and a part of Monterey — is shaping up into a race between Lou Haddad, a former Seaside mayor, and David Fortune, a Monterey police captain.

Burkleo, 49, a former Seaside councilwoman, never was challenged. Her Division 1 will embrace part of Seaside and all of Fort Ord.

The filing deadline was Friday, Aug. 6. Voter Divisions 3, 4 and 5 will elect directors in November 1995.

Last day in office

KARIN STRASSER Kauffman, supervisor for Monterey County's 5th District, cleaned out her files recently.

She announced in March that she would not seek re-election after two terms in office. An open house was held at her Monterey Courthouse office Monday, Aug. 9, for constituents and friends to visit her on her last official day as supervisor.

Board mulls term limits

BOARD MEMBERS will discuss the concept of term limits for directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Chairman Ken Long and Director Dale Hekhuis have been vocal supporters of term limits. It is expected the board will discuss a limitation of two terms, according to MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer.

In the district's 16-year history, only Director Dick Heuer, who came to the board in June 1983, has served longer than eight years.

The board will discuss the proposal at its meeting Monday, Aug. 16. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

The topic is scheduled as an "action item" — leaving it open for the board to direct water district staff to explore the legal process for imposing term limits.

Ironically, neither Long nor Hekhuis would be affected by a new term limit, since each must step down with the inauguration of new voter divisions in November. Since both live outside the just-established Divisions 1 and 2, they cannot seek re-election.

Cofer said term limits would require action by the California legislature. In all likelihood, the legislature would need a MPWMD resolution that makes such a request.

Ever wonder why other walking shoes leave your feet hot and sweaty, tired and sore?

Very simple. They're not made like Mephisto.

Many other walking shoes, you see, use synthetic materials, and synthetics retain heat, moisture and odors.

Mephistos, on the other hand, are all-natural. They're made of vegetable dyed full-grain leathers, pure latex, cork and rubber. Only leather "breathes" to assure maximum foot comfort. Combined with other natural materials, you'll feel like you're walking on feathers.

And other walking shoes certainly aren't manufactured like Mephisto, by hand, one at a time, in the matchless European tradition.

It's no wonder Mephisto is the most popular walking shoe on earth. It's the natural selection.

Tips from Sweet Shot Golf & Tennis

...to improve your game and make it more enjoyable

Choke down consistently with your chipping clubs

Grip down on your chipping clubs for control-halfway to the steel at least. But grip down to the exact same point on every club, to standardize the feel from one club to the next. I hear weekend golfers say that different clubs have different feels. That's because they grip one club short and another one long. So grip down to the identical spot on every club.

need. Those more fortunate took in the less so. Children worked alongside of adults.

"One little guy was sweeping up the street, trying to do his share," recalled Windham. "There was no sense of thinking, 'I'm taking care of myself.' Everybody was there for everybody else."

The Red Cross was there for everyone as well.

As disaster-trained workers, Marr and Windham's job was to stock the emergency-relief vehicle with supplies and deliver them to those in need. They served between 350 and 400 meals each day to victims and others fighting the flood.

"The Red Cross was a lifesaver, and people appreciated that," said Marr. "We take for granted that somebody is going to take care of us in an emergency or disaster — provide food, shelter, mental health and family services. As it turns out, that's basically the Red Cross."

Signed up

One year ago, at the onset of Hurricane Andrew, Marr and Windham signed up as volunteers at the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross. They have friends and relatives in Florida, where they lived until three years ago.

They explained they wanted to do what they could to help.

But first there were courses in CPR, first aid, disaster relief and shelter management. Nine months later, the two women were officially signed on with the National Disaster Relief Services.

As the flooding progressed in the Midwest, they anticipated a call. It came on Tuesday and they were ready to leave on Wednesday.

"There's never a good time to go to a disaster," Marr said. "I had two grandchildren who were coming from Dallas to visit, and Barbara was waiting for a grandchild to be born."

After making a few telephone calls and packing their bags, they were ready to go. The next day, they were in St. Louis, and two days later Jefferson City — where the river was starting to crest and volunteers were in high demand.

The Red Cross paid for food and lodging and air fare. But the two received no money for their services — 46 hour days over two weeks.

"I feel very fortunate in my life," Windham said. "This is a small way to make a difference, to give back — to be a part of the human race."

Sunset task force to host town hall meeting Tuesday

CARMEL'S SUNSET Center Renovation Task Force will host a town hall meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17, at the Sunset Center Theater.

The forum will be conducted by representatives of Broome, Oringdolph, O'Toole, Rudolf, Boles & Associates (BOOR/A), the Portland architectural firm hired to perform a conceptual design and feasibility study for the renovation of Sunset Center Theater.

"The BOOR/A staff is looking forward to an evening of discovery, one that will prove to be a building process in generating creative ideas and enthusiastic participation in discussing the goals, objectives, issues, elements and impacts associated with the renovation of the Sunset Center Theater," said Sunset Center Director Brian Donoghue.

According to Donoghue, those attending will include Bud Oringdolph, BOOR/A architect and principal member; Patrick Harrington, BOOR/A theater consultant; Paul Landry of Landry and Bogan - a Mountain View theater consulting company; and Ron McKay, an acoustical engineer. Electrical, mechanical and structural engineers also will be present.

'A rare opportunity'

"This is a rare opportunity for the public to have truly significant impact on a most important project from the ground floor up," Donoghue noted. "Everyone connected with the Sunset Center hopes the public will attend in large numbers for the maximum input of information regarding this exciting undertaking."

Planned as a brainstorming session, the event is designed for all community members with an interest in the arts.

Members of the Carmel City Council, the Community and Cultural Commission, the Sunset Center Renovation Task Force, Sunset Center staff and several other community groups also are planning to attend the forum, according to Donoghue.

They are extremely serious about getting all the community's ideas - people in the arts, people not in the arts, people that live across the street," Donoghue concluded.

BOOR/A representatives will remain in town for two days after the meeting, and plan to return in September for another on-site visit.

By Susan Cantrell

Stanton is queen for a ...?

IN A wave which shall now be known as "the Stanton sweep," Virginia Stanton, premiere philanthropist and party girl, signalled love to her court at The Inn at Spanish Bay on Friday night, at a history-making birthday party celebrating one decade less than a century of living and giving on this planet.

Now, I've given myself some pretty fancy birthday parties, but hers takes the cake.

Dressed in hot pink satin from her neatly coiffed head to her toes, Stanton said with a giggle, "My birthday wish is that everybody could be as happy as me."

We were, we were.

For starters, among her intimate entourage of about 250 friends, were Bob and Dolores Hope. And the years haven't dampened Dolores' mockingbird voice or Bob's ribald sense of humor. After being deluged by adoring fans, Bob stepped to the podium and told some of the naughtiest jokes he's ever told in public.

The next "This is Your Life" present was from mayor Dan Albert, who proclaimed August 10, her actual birthday, to be Virginia Stanton Day.

After handing her a gavel with which to fend off Bud Allen - who kept picking her up, and a flag - which she flitted around like a torero, he said, "Believe me, I don't know what the hell's going to happen Aug. 10, but I know it's going to be great."

What else could a person want? A spectacular four-course dinner? She got it. An octet of tuxedoed men singing her praises (Dan Albert, Chris Dix, Lew Fenton, Hank Ketcham, Tom Oliver, Ned Prothro, Gordon Smith, Tom Tonkin and Myles Williams)? She got them. Standing ovations for her accomplishments and simply her being? She got them. Songs sung by Dolores Hope, "You're just too marvelous..." A movie depicting her life, loves and achievements? She got them. The donation of a $23,000 cruise for bidding? She got it. A museum in her name? She bought it...

"I don't ever think I'll be the same again," she said. "My head's getting bigger and bigger."

When, after being proclaimed the First Lady of Monterey, she was allowed to speak, she thanked Gordon and Ramona Smith, "without whom we wouldn't be here tonight."

And she warmly thanked every guest, including Frances and Gus Arriola, Maggie Eastwood, Clint Eastwood, Irene and Frank Crispo, Sister Carlotta, Wendy Brodie, maestro Clark Suttle, ad infinitum, saying that every single person present was her friend and had supported her charitable endeavors in some way.

The movie illustrated Stanton, an only child and usually "the center of attention," according to emcee Alan Richmond, and her life with such scenes as: a young girl on a leopard skin; a tyke dressed in Indian garb; a tyke eating a monstrous slice of watermelon; Virginia pitching in for the American Red Cross; her life with Bob and their triplets at their Carmel Valley home, a famous one-room house with no customary bedrooms, at which she continues to give smashing parties for worthy organizations; and photos of her as party editor of House Beautiful.

To the above she simply waved her hand, not with the bob of a beauty contestant or the restrained backhand of Queen Elizabeth, but with an elegant sweep across the room, as if to encompass and acknowledge each of us, and said, "There isn't anyone here who didn't do a helluva lot... I've never been so overcome in my life. I've just been impelled to help people... Thanks to each of you here in back of me."

And then, using the spotlight expertly, as she is so skilled at doing, she asked us all, "Have you bought a brick yet?" for the Littlefield Garden for the visually impaired.

The answer will always be, "Yes, Virginia." Now, what is the question?

We were also reminded of her new project, the Virginia Stanton Endowment for Children's Heritage Education, lest future generations forget the unique history of our area.

Yes, it was an unforgettable birthday party. And Michelle Noseworthy, who has worked with Stanton on various projects, helped me interview guests to find out what their most indulgent birthdays have been.

Bob Hope admitted to a $200,000 present, presented by Dolores.

THE BIRTHDAY Bash Octet, headed by Myles Williams, sung "Hello Dolly" to Virginia Stanton during ceremonies held in her honor at the Inn at Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach Friday. Joining Myles were Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, Herald Manager Chris Dix, Lew Fenton, Cartoonist Hank Ketcham, Tom Oliver, Ned Prothro, Gordon Smith and Tom Tonkin. (All photos by Chuck Scardina)

SAM TUNNELL, Dorothy Stevens, Morgan and June Stock, Mary Margaret Graham, and Mary and Edward Ballengee (seated) helped celebrate Virginia Stanton's 90th birthday.

WITH THE help of her nephew Vincent Catania, Kitty Ragsdale presents a huge photo album to Virginia Stanton during her 90th birthday celebration at Spanish Bay.

VIRGINIA STANTON, who celebrated her 90th birthday August 10, poses with longtime friends Bob and Dolores Hope. The famous couple came all the way from Palm Springs to help celebrate Virginia's birthday at the Inn at Spanish Bay.

VIRGINIA HAD no trouble blowing out the candles on her birthday cake.

Dan Albert cited when his wife, Joanne, whisked him from his coaching duties into the car and off to Carmel for a romantic evening. And the topper (his birthday is April 15) was a $1,500 tax refund.

Myles Williams once had 250 of his best friends over. "If you can look at a crowd and know all their names and that you have a personal relationship with each... it got me through my 50th birthday."

Roger and Maya Mann celebrated his 33rd birthday in Greece with a lamb feast and views of the temple Apollo.

Pat Yates received a black tie party at Quail Lodge with 200 of her friends, the Greg Franks Band, and her favorite champagne. To top it off, snow drifted onto the golf course. "Looking back, it (the party) must have been a guilt present from my ex-husband," she said.

Frank Rogers went to Club 21 in New York with a very special friend. Hm-m-m.

Karin Strasser-Kauffman had a political party with 600 of her closest (that many?) friends. "It was very indulgent and wonderful" she said. "My husband said, 'Next year we dine alone!'" She is neighbors with Virginia Stanton and said they both love parties.

Jeani Hurd had a 40th with 150 people, a fortune teller, a cartoonist and a live band. At this juncture I digress, to tell you that Hurd said Stanton's license plate, AIF, means "ass in first," if that tells you anything about Stanton's sense of humor. Apparently she learned to do this to protect her back while entering her car.

Anyway...

Kitty Ragsdale, who earlier presented Stanton with a memory book, said her birthday is on Dec. 12, Guadalupe day. Thus, she and a friend traveled to Mexico, carrying a cake from California, for her celebration.

Michelle Noseworthy's birthday was the next day (Aug. 7) and she had already celebrated by cruising the Baltic with Hurd.

Sandy Smith drew a blank on outrageous birthdays, however, she was surely inspired by Stanton's.

Well, I started a string of extravaganzas the day I turned 30. On my 40th, I hired a limo and dropped in on every friend I had whom I was reasonably certain had never traveled in one. We cruised Alvarado and then went to dinner atop the Sheraton. And the next year, Ted Balestreri and Burt Cutino saw to it that a dozen friends and myself will never forget the evening at the Sardine Factory. There was a maitre'd magician, balloons, and ice swans for each guest.

However, all my parties put together couldn't begin to compare to Virginia Stanton's big birthday bash. Nor could my paltry birthday cakes hold a candle to hers, or the smoke produced from all those candles...

I love a person who stands up and claims their birthday. What could be more meaningful to each human being than the day they were born? I have no respect for the meek who let their day pass by with nary a word and then whine and "guilt" those around them for forgetting.

I say Bravo! to Virginia Stanton, for her good deeds, her impish face and brazen charm. To the grace with which she received so many kudos that night. And bravo! to those who celebrated her arrival on this earth with a deliciously indulgent party.

And, Virginia, might I suggest that you give a Bravo Brazil party on your 100th and pay to have all your guests flown there to celebrate with you? Just a thought...

Party, party

So who will dare follow Stanton's party, also at The Inn at Spanish Bay? Robert Mondavi, for his 80th birthday. said, noting he expects the minors will deny the charges. Each of the three CHS students has a private attorney.

Meyer said the D.A.'s office will determine whether to ask for a motion to try the young men as adults.

"It's up to us to ask if we think it's appropriate," Meyer said. "There are a lot of things to consider. I would be surprised if they were tried as adults, but it's definitely a possibility."

Pre-trial hearing date

Meyer said Monterey County Superior Judge Robert Hendrick will probably set a pre-trial hearing date at the Aug. 25 appearance, and might also set the date of the jurisdictional hearing (actual trial date).

"Things move pretty fast in juvenile court," he said.

According to Meyer, the investigation is still continuing and new information has been coming in almost daily from Monterey County Sheriff's Department Investigator Ron Qualls.

"There are a lot of people who have opinions and there are probably more witnesses out there," Meyer said.

Hazdovac honored

is right, said Hazdovac.

During the tournament, he take lunches to other volunteers and keeps the starting tents supplied with candy and drinks. He observed, "This is a polite way of putting an old goat out to pasture."

Over the years, Hazdovac has seen a lot as a golf tournament volunteer.

One time he was standing next to a young security guard who was told "Even if the Saviour should come in his car — he can't park here."

Shortly thereafter, said Hazdovac, "I saw a man driving toward us in a big, white, Rolls Royce. He was smoking a pipe. The kid yells, 'You can't park here. Not even the Saviour can park here.' I had to tell him it was okay to let Bing Crosby in. Bing laughed so hard he almost fell out of his car."

A sin

Hazdovac said it's almost a sin he participates in a golf tournament that is played on three of the world's most beautiful golf courses because he doesn't play golf.

"Sometimes I don't even know who the guys are who are playing," he noted. But, of course, he has gotten to know a few regulars during 40 years on the courses. One of them is Clint Eastwood.

"It's a family," said Hazdovac. "I've know Clint for years. I looked forward to him being at the awards ceremonies last week. He's on the board of directors, and I was very disappointed he wasn't there. A lot of people were disappointed. This business about being busy — well, we're all busy."

Raising two daughters, running a business, being a singing bartender for 35 years at the First Theater and volunteering every year for three weeks could only happen with the undaunted support of his wife, Lillian.

"Because of an understanding family, who were willing to sacrifice many weekends over the years," said Hazdovac, "it was possible for me to do this."

DAFFY DAVE created a myriad of fun things out of balloons for the children who attended last weekend's Carmel Valley Fiesta.

THE KIDDIE train's conductor, "Sawdust," was a big hit at the Carmel Valley Fiesta.

Carmel Valley Fiesta lures throng

THE FOURTH annual Carmel Valley Fiesta had something for everyone.

Last weekend's event at the Carmel Valley Community Park in Carmel Valley Village brought in the crowds for the Big Parade, Street Dance, Pancake Breakfast, 10K race, booths with arts and crafts, games, music, clowns, kiddie train, the Mixtlan Mariachi troupe, drawings and a variety of food booths.

The Fiesta is sponsored by the Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club and all proceeds are returned to the community.

Davi's aggressive campaign tightened race

Incumbent, and that city was in Karas' former 4th District realm.

In the end, the impression is that Davi beat the odds in doing so well and coming so close.

Remembering the primary

The June 8 primary, with six candidates and a big victory for Karas, gave no indication the runoff would wind up so close.

Karas had received nearly as many votes (8,515) as the combination of Davi (5,051), David Hendrick (2,220) and Harrison Williams (1,347).

But just as much can happen in eight weeks, another thing is sure: the two-person race offered a new dynamic.

Since the election, Karas has remarked repeatedly that Davi ran an "aggressive campaign." But what specifically does that mean?

To Fran Farina — who had finished third on June 8 and then threw her support behind Karas — it means raising and spending more money than Karas. "Jeff had the best campaign money could buy," said Farina, who lives in Carmel Valley. "He bought name-recognition."

Roger Williams, who is president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners, argues there was more to it than that.

Davi's aggressiveness meant not neglecting to pound the pavement and earn his votes.

"I know that, out here in the valley, Jeff came and met every merchant, shop owner and grocery store that he could," said Williams. "While Sam was being very complacent, Jeff made a definite impression on people."

Williams also believes that the letter circulated by Sheriff Norm Hicks endorsing Davi "must have been a definite influence" to those who live in the unincorporated areas.

Voters in the unincorporated areas — including roughly 2,000 in Pebble Beach — registered 4,498 for Davi and 3,679 for Karas.

In the valley, Davi received 1,776 votes to Karas' 1,754.

Davi's victory in Pebble Beach had much to do with the Republican-favoring demographics, according to sources. In an interview with The Carmel Pine Cone, Karas said he expected to lose Pebble Beach. "I've never been their favorite son," he admitted.

While Davi's approach included relentless charges of "failed leadership," Karas had decided from the outset that he would take the high road and refrain from negativity.

What helped his conscience may have hurt his final numbers. Davi was casting Karas as the vulnerable one put on the defensive over his record.

Logically, if anyone should have been especially vulnerable it was Davi, who, at 25, had no political experience.

"If Sam had been a little stronger and more aggressive, that would have helped him," said Farina.

Karas himself admits he did not target the absentee ballot holders. He had assumed they were familiar enough with the candidates to stick with their original primary choices.

Davi won the absentee vote by a 6 percent margin.

The switch-over factor

The numbers suggest strongly that a considerable number of voters who supported Karas in the primary switched over to Davi.

Hindsight makes for interesting observations: While Karas added fewer than 700 votes in the runoff, Davi pulled together over 4,000 new supporters. Farina herself admits she knows firsthand of many of her original supporters who did not fall in line with her endorsement of Karas.

Nevertheless, Karas had key strongholds, especially in areas where concern about environmental protection is paramount.

In Carmel, voters went with him 905 to 660. Pacific Grove voters cast 2,223 ballots for Karas, compared to 1,632 for Davi.

"Environmentalists worked very hard for Sam Karas," said Clayton Anderson, a Carmel resident and the Sierra Club's political committee chairman. "Carmel is environmentally grounded, and so is Pacific Grove."

The Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club endorsed Karas. "Davi was seen as a real estate person with a developer's point of view," Anderson noted.

What happened in the valley?

Karas' slight deficit of votes in Carmel Valley may be a symbolic loss of sorts for Karas.

Farina points out that people fail to realize the valley is composed of conservative and liberal pockets, creating mini-regions within the overall region. The valley was never an area Karas could take for granted, she said.

The CVPOA's Williams explains Karas had the advantages of name-recognition, "but Sam has represented the 4th District, and their concerns don't always match ours. Also, Sam's rivalry with Karin Strasser Kauffman wasn't necessarily good for him out in the valley, even though he was well-known."

The Karas-Davi battle never became a single-issue campaign. But, according to Lois Starnes, who leads the Citizens for Hatton Canyon, the freeway issue — which bitterly splits the peninsula — was the determining factor to many.

Davi supports the project and Karas does not, and these platforms are well-known.

Nevertheless, Starnes correctly points out that the issue was not of key importance in Pacific Grove or Carmel, where Karas had a lock on the electorate.

In a race that was supposed to follow a thoroughly predictable pattern, only the results from those two cities could Karas truly count on.

Fortunately for him, that was enough to win by a mere dozen votes.

Breakdown of voting areas

City	Karas	Davi
Carmel	905	660
Monterey	2,394	2,399
Pacific Grove	2,223	1,632
Unincorporated areas
Carmel Valley	1,754	1,776
Carmel Highlands	662	703
Carmel Woods	350	313
Big Sur	159	91
Jacks Peak	185	194
Pebble Beach	569	1,421

Note: Davi garnered 4,498 votes to Karas' 3,679 in the total count for the unincorporated areas.

District, which includes Monterey, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach, Carmel, Carmel Valley and the Big Sur coast.

Karas said he also intends to "fight for jobs," support projects that will create light industry and provide more low-income housing.

"My dream for the next four years," said Karas, "is to create one single housing project for migrant workers — so we no longer have people living in caves."

More congratulations were given all around by Karas, most notably for his wife, Edie. "She is my life," he said playfully. "I'm her clone, really."

He also acknowledged his gratefulness to be on a board that will have a Latino supervisor for the first time in 100 years. "I am pleased to be a here at a time when Monterey County elected a Latino," said Karas. "Salinas is a gentleman."

Simon Salinas, an educator and former Salinas councilman, will represent the 1st District. He is the first Latino to occupy a seat on the board since Juan B. Castro, the founder of Castroville, took office in 1893.

Alternating between English and Spanish, Salinas said, "As representatives, I hope we can develop the team concept. It will help the weaknesses become irrelevant. We have the ingredients of a good team."

Paraphrasing one of Mexico's presidents, Salinas said, "All of us must keep in mind that among nations and among individuals — respect keeps the peace."

Along with Karas and Salinas, Edith Johnsen was sworn in to represent the 4th District. Johnsen was the Mayor of Marina until Monday evening, Aug. 9. She is also an English teacher at Monterey Peninsula College.

Johnsen pointed out that with the closure of Fort Ord, Marina is experiencing a 17.5 percent unemployment rate, and Seaside's unemployed has reached 19 percent.

"The biggest challenge we have is to provide jobs and economic stability in the area," said Johnsen.

"The 4th District is the seventh most ethnically diverse community in the United States," she said. "There are 19 different language groups."

As the representative of Sand City, a section of Monterey, Seaside, Del Rey Oaks, Marina and Fort Ord, she declared, "Their voices will be heard."

Campaign spending law piques interest ing to Freeman, who will report to the council at its next meeting, Sept. 14.

"I don't know yet if what the city council is trying to do can be done," he said. "I am not sure if this will work."

Freeman said he will have to find out whether the focus will have to remain with campaign contributions, as opposed to spending. "If you want to sell your house and everything you own to run for office, there is nothing to stop you. But they (the council) might be able to say, 'Each person can give a maximum of $500.'"

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, who also supports the concept of campaign finance restrictions, admits such legislation — however it is drafted — would be largely symbolic. "I am concerned only about the people who are willing to pay huge amounts of money," she said.

Beth Wright, president of the Carmel Residents Association, said the CRA supports the idea. "We feel strongly that this should be done," she said.

Many of the supporters of local campaign reform objected to former mayor Clint Eastwood's infusion of some $40,000 in services to the yes on Measure H campaign prior to the June 8 municipal referendum.

(In all, supporters of the rezoning spent roughly $53,000, while opponents had expenditures of only about $6,800, said City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer.)

Critics of the big spending lamented that the Measure H supporters were contributing to an undesired change in the quaint character of Carmel politics.

Councilmen Bob Fischer and Phil Coniglio are cold to the idea of imposing campaign finance limits.

"I do feel that Clint spent a little extra money," said Coniglio. "But I personally think the freedom is where it's at. People should be able to spend what they want to spend."

Fischer said he doubts whether the issue would have arisen had Measure H failed at the polls. "What if the shoe were on the other foot, if all that money had been raised by the other side?" he asked rhetorically.

Fischer also believes spending or contribution limits would be hard to monitor, considering that it is sometimes a confusing array of committees that orchestrate the spending and fund-raising carried out on behalf of a candidate or measure.

Lift-A-Thon slated for Friday

Carmel High football players provide 'lift' for program

By GARTH MERRILL

AFTER A SUMMER of serious weight training, the Carmel High School football team is looking for a big payoff, both in the pocket book and on the playing field.

The Padres will pump iron for profit at the team's fifth annual Lift-A-Thon at 5 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 13 at the Carmel Youth Center. The team begins official practice Monday, Aug. 16.

Head Coach Craig Johnson said the Lift-A-Thon is the main money maker for the football team. It also marks the end of summer conditioning and the start of gridiron practice.

"My No. 1 goal in having an off-season weight-training program is to eliminate injuries," Johnson said. "But the weight program serves a couple of purposes. It not only gets them in shape, but it also gets them working together."

It also makes money. The Lift-A-Thon — in which players are pledged money based on the total pounds they can press in three different lifts — has earned anywhere between $3,000-$6,000 each of its last four years.

"It gets us through the season, and it gets us through the year," Johnson said.

Creative financing

Slim athletic budgets in state schools have forced many coaches into creative financing. "Much of the fund raising and revenue generating has been put on individual coaches now," said Johnson, who majored in business at Cal Poly-SLO.

"We get a little bit from our school and from our administration," Johnson noted. "It isn't as if they don't support us, because they do. But they just don't have the funds if we want extra weight machines, or football equipment like sleds... this all goes to stuff like that."

Johnson, in his fifth year as Padre coach, is banking that all the lifting will benefit the team on the field, too. He said injuries have dropped dramatically since he started the summer program four years ago.

"You're going to have your twisted ankles and your sprained thumbs and wrists. But I think we've had only two serious knee injuries in the last four years, which is pretty exceptional."

The team has been lifting at Carmel Youth Center all summer, under the direction of CHS assistant coach Mark Fandrel and Carmel Youth Center's weight instructor, Donovan Lorraine.

'Stick together'

When the season starts, Johnson thinks the hard work will show.

"Guys that work hard together will stick together in

Dan Dowling

Dan Dowling, a nationally recognized political cartoonist and Carmel resident, died July 27 in Monterey. He was 87.

Mr. Dowling, who retired to Carmel in 1974, was a political cartoonist for the Omaha World Herald, the New York Herald Tribune and the Kansas City Star.

Mr. Dowling was born in O'Neil, Neb., but spent his boyhood in Iowa. His hero was Ding Darling, whose political cartoons in the Des Moines Register and Leader eventually inspired his career.

Following his graduation from high school, Mr. Dowling studied at the University of California at Berkeley from 1924 to 1928. After college, he traveled around the world as a dance band drummer.

In 1931, he enrolled at the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago, but that phase of his academic career was short-lived. He switched to police reporting and began drawing cartoons on the side, an experience that enabled him to move later to New York and join the Associated Press as a retouch artist.

Mr. Dowling served in the Infantry as an Army captain during World War II. After his military service, he joined the New York Herald Tribune's staff in 1949 and remained with the newspaper until it folded. He then returned to the Midwest and did political cartoons for the Kansas City Star for six years.

His honors include the Christopher Medal in 1956 and the Freedom Foundation Award, presented in the same year.

Mr. Dowling is survived by his wife, the former Harriet Thatcher Kelley; a son, Daniel, of Greenwich, Conn.; a daughter, Blair Trimble of Locust Valley, N.Y.; a sister, Mrs. Dewey J. Bisgard of Ann Arbor, Mich., and three grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at St. John's Episcopal Church of Lattintown in Locust Valley. Burial was held in Harlan, Iowa.

Mrs. Economos was a buyer for Roos Atkins and a women's merchandise manager at Grodin's, both in San Francisco, for 20 years, before going into business in Carmel.

She is survived by her husband, Peter; a brother, George Capanis of Walnut Creek, and many nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held tomorrow at the Monterey Peninsula Mortuary, followed by burial at Mission Memorial Park.

The family prefers that contributions in her memory be sent to the donor's favorite charity.

In 1952, he established a used car dealership in Monterey and later operated a Honda dealership in Watsonville with a partner. He was also engaged in the import/export business and held worldwide sales rights for an electronic instrument used in the food and beverage industries for quality control.

In his youth, he played polo and in 1929 he set a high school track record for the quarter-mile. During World War II, he worked as a civilian, designing specifications for military vehicles having had specialized training through the Chrysler Corporation's military transportation program.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"Senior Citizens and Students—A Winning combination." That message was scripted on the dessert cake at a high school event in Hastings-on-Hudson, New York. When students stage their annual play, there is a special performance for a select audience. All village residents 60 and over are invited to a matinee and dinner in the school. It's one way to show appreciation for what the older people have done for the community, said one 16-year-old student. Looking ahead, she said she hopes young people will do the same when she is in her 60's. Alcoholism is a serious problem for many Americans of all ages. For some, drinking first becomes a problem late in life. A leading clinic found that four out of 10 older men and women treated did not become heavy drinkers until they were in their 60's. Some take to the bottle out of boredom, some because of the death of a spouse or other loss. Clinicians say such older drinkers have a good chance of overcoming the problem if they participate in a treatment program. Remember When? January 1, 1934—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was created as part of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "New Deal" to protect savings accounts from bank failures.

A vote for merit over money

THE OBVIOUS distinction between a small town and a big city is scale.

Anyone who has ever tried to improve a residence or put up a new commercial building in a commercial zone understands there will be boundaries surrounding one's ambitions. The intent here is not so much to legislate character as to recognize reasonable limits.

Because all laws are, to some extent, an encroachment on personal freedom, none should be enacted lightly. Nevertheless, putting up some kind of ceiling on how much candidates or ballot measure advocates may spend or receive would not be ill-conceived legislation; merely, it would be an attempt to recognize the importance of scale in a small town's political life.

Such limits in local elections would not prevent working people from seeking office, as some have strained to argue. Rather, such legislation would assure that ordinary, civic-minded folks would not be out of their league before the contest has even begun.

Question on deck

At its September meeting, the Carmel City Council is expected to discuss the possibility of bringing campaign finance reform home to Carmel. The council will discuss its options for setting a public hearing and possibly preparing an ordinance.

Part of the motivation to create such a law originates with the big spending carried out by supporters of Measure H, who outspent opponents by a ratio of more than 8-to-1. Former Mayor Clint Eastwood alone contributed about $40,000.

Mayor Ken White — who, incidentally, happened to support the rezoning cause with great ardor — maintained that Eastwood was setting back the yes on H cause through an inappropriate degree of generosity.

We cannot say whether the sudden influx of funding was the best or worst thing that happened to the cause of rezoning. Indeed, a reasonable campaign spending limit would have kept us from pondering this question now.

The council should take the time to explore its legal options, even if the reform is most desperately needed at the state and county levels.

Reasonable limits — though they appear mainly symbolic — can do little harm. At best, they may ensure all the players in the political game will compete on even ground. If there is anything available to us that can ensure that merit, not money, shapes our local destiny, we should certainly avail ourselves of it.

Learning to get by with less

City Administrator Jere Kersnar's words still ring out from his informal budget seminar for the Carmel City Council before adoption of the 1993-94 budget: "You can't cut staff without it affecting services."

While we know this truth to be self-evident, we also note that unavoidable staff cuts may provide the best impetus for finding creative ways to retain the threatened services, to the degree possible. The fire department restructuring announced this week may be a case-in-point.

Fire inspections will be carried out as usual, despite the loss of the fire-prevention specialist; the department, unable to rely on one full-time person, will be forced to use teamwork with the nine remaining paid staffers to satisfy the same inspections schedule. Fire Chief Bill Hill stressed that only the special inspections and the plan-checking may be slowed, not general emergency response.

As the buzzword of the 1990s has been "downsizing" in all organizations, public and private, the necessary corollary has become streamlining. And yes, Kersnar is right — some service loss is to be tolerated.

In this recession, we are fast learning that Carmel's government couldn't grow indefinitely, and that less money in the coffers spurs painful cuts. And next year may demand more.

The lesson of the fire department may be that not even the sacred positions, such as the fire prevention specialist, are truly sacred. We can get by with less with designs on doing just as well.

Let's hope the fire department's new inspection program is a success.

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Popularity of poetry

Dear Editor:

It is often the details that distinguish one small town newspaper from another. Please add my vote in favor of more space for poetry.

The popularity of poetry is increasing. As a means of artistic expression, it is a form that touches us on many levels.

The literary arts have an extensive history on the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel itself has nurtured many a writer in its time. It would be grand if The Pine Cone could continue to support local talent.

I will watch for further developments.

Demand accountability

Dear Editor:

I agree with Karin Strasser Kauffman in her assessment of financial problems for local government, and in her pointing her finger at Sacramento as the source of the problem. While it may not be the case in other counties and some cities, reality is that there is so very little "fat" in our local and county budgets that "cutting fat" would amount to liposuction on an anorexic!

I believe the problem goes even further, and what is needed is a hard look at all levels of government. The only way out of the mess that government has become is to take a fresh, hard look at what function each level of government is supposed to perform: what services should the federal government provide, what services the state should provide, and what should local government be doing for its constituents.

It is no longer clear, and has not been clear for a long time. The resulting confusion has allowed funding sleight of hand, abuse, excess and the current local government crisis.

When it is made clear what services each level of government will provide, then funding will follow in a direct, cost-effective manner. Strasser Kauffman points the way in suggesting a state Constitutional Convention to attack the problem at the state level.

Of course, the only way we taxpayers will receive accountability for how our money is spent is if we demand accountability. I applaud Karin Strasser Kauffman in raising this issue and strongly recommend we all work together to straighten out the mess. If we wait for politicians to fix it, it will never happen!

Call for action — gun violence must end

SHOTS RANG out. People ran for their lives. Eight people were killed — leaving behind shattered families, friends and co-workers. When the smoke cleared at 101 California Street, my son had lost one of his close friends. John Scully's young life had been cut short, his wife of 10 months severely wounded.

On that tragic day, something came between John Scully and his ability to fulfill the promises of a young man bursting with life and with love. It was not a disease. It was not an accident. It was a semi-automatic assault weapon set loose in the hands of a deranged gunman.

Over the past few years, we've heard story after story of disgruntled employees using violence to vent their grievances. All over America, workplace violence is on the rise; and, in California alone, it accounts for almost 20 percent of all workplace deaths.

Lives touched

The epidemic of gun violence touches too many of our lives. Its victims are our sons and daughters, our neighbors and our friends. Have we forgotten the 21 people who were gunned down at the San Ysidro McDonald's in 1984? Or, the gunman who opened fire on a Stockton school yard in 1989? How many more children must die, how many more families destroyed before we act?

Time and time again, we hear the gun lobby defending the assault weapons, defending the Uzis. These guns don't kill, they say. Only people kill. Well, all the well paid lobbyists and all the influence-peddlers in the world won't change the fact that guns help people kill people. They make it easy to kill people.

The NRA claims that gun control doesn't work, but let's look at the statistics that the NRA doesn't want us to see. Let's look at the number of people killed by handguns in nations that have strong gun control laws. In 1990, there were 22 people killed by handguns in Great Brit-

Carmel Commentary

By Don Bowen

A critical, fatal disease strikes

WE HAVE A nationwide disease. I don't know when it started but I do know that it is critical and fatal — and that it is rampant even here in our beloved Carmel. In fact, it could wipe us out... and I mean everything like the country and Carmel. And after watching it grow and experiencing it face to face for many years, I am getting closer to putting a name on it.

My symptoms have been nausea, headaches, restless nights of half sleep, stomach pains... and it even affects my morale, my enthusiasm and my attitude. It hurts not only me but because of the insidious and powerful affects of it on me, it also hurts my family.

The first time I became somewhat aware of the disease was when I finally realized — or admitted to myself — that I was a first-class, All-American prude. A square. A nerd. A throwback.

After all these years, I still like Mom and apple pie and I respect the American flag. A handshake is a deal as good as a written contract. My word was my bond. When I said I was going to do something, by God I did it. A principle was worth fighting for. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. The thought of lying never entered my head. Honesty is the best policy. Words like trust and honor have deep meaning for me. After all, they are words to live by... or so I thought.

Disease is severe

Now the disease has struck and I realize more and more every day that more and more people have totally forgotten these thoughts and words and the meaning of them. In fact, the disease is so bad and severe that many don't even realize they have it.

I suspect that to this day, Charles Keating doesn't really think he did anything wrong. And the same for Michael Milikin and all the others who have been caught with their hand in the cookie jar. The newspapers and magazines are full of stories of corporate and political fraud... and it's getting worse.

Because we see so much of it, it is eroding any values we might have left. We're getting used to seeing it and expecting it, and when we discover these corporate and political injustices, the punishment doesn't seem somehow to match the crime. A 12-year sentence for Keating? Milikin is out of prison already. How about seven years for murder? Is it any wonder that crime is on the increase? It's bound to be when you think you have a 50-50 chance of beating the system and getting a light sentence.

Think of all the people behind bars who have committed major crimes against our society and have light sentences and counting the days until they get out so they can start to spend all the money they have stolen, or sell their story for TV or movie rights, or get on the circuit as a high-priced speaker.

Better examples?

They say the future of our country is in our children, and they are obviously not getting the right message from situations or violations like these. What wonderful examples we are setting! But are we setting any better examples of how to live by our actions at home?

When I was growing up, we had role models all over the place. The movies extolled the merits of the good guy. Be honest and honorable, defend the weak and defenseless, and you got the pretty girl in the end. Who didn't want to grow up to be like Gary Cooper, Spencer Tracy or John Wayne?

Today we've got Arnold Schwarzenegger wiping out an average of 70 people per movie. Or Bruce Willis blowing people up. Or Michael Douglas dropping his pants and receiving oral sex in an elevator.

No wonder our kids are confused. According to what I have been reading, our kids are turning to carrying guns because they want to feel important and they want to get our attention. If they don't get a role model or any direction at home, they sure are not going to get it from the movies or television.

Most of us should start looking into ourselves because it looks like that's where all the trouble — or the disease — begins. It all really emanates from ourselves or the family core. We do it; our kids will do it. We say it; our kids will say it.

We have to start to look very carefully at what kind of examples we set at home and in our everyday dealings with our neighbors, business associates and the people we come in contact with everyday.

This may be coming from a prude, but I still like to believe that the most powerful thing in this world is the individual who sets a good example in his daily living, both at home and out of it.

There is a cure for the disease. It's us.

Personal Perspective

Apathy crippling Forest Theater; community commitment critical

REMEMBER THE innovative ticket program designed to fill the many empty seats at the Forest Theater while helping you market your business?

The Forest Theater gave out 3,000 tickets to 100 Carmel Business Association (CBA) members to give out to their guests and patrons. We would then bill you after the performance (only for those tickets that got used). It was a win-win scenario. You rewarded your customer and marketed your business, the customer got a wonderful evening in Carmel — doing something that has been done since 1910 — and the Forest Theater could sell the seats necessary to continue on for yet another year.

All very fine in theory. The facts are that of those 3,000 tickets, only about 150 found their way back to the box office for the smash musical hit, Carousel. Many thanks to those businesses that let their patrons know the theater existed, and used word-of-mouth to talk up one of the better parts of the Carmel experience. The sad fact is, however, that the vast majority of those tickets are still put away in a back corner of your businesses — out of sight, out of mind.

In the hole

This is a friendly reminder to start talking up the rest of the season before we end up with a losing season. And that's where we are headed. Carousel was an expensive production, and we're in the hole.

Most of the promotional tickets are still at the establishments they were delivered to at the beginning of the season. Worse yet, two fine plays — Tom Jones and Lettice and Loveage — are playing until Aug. 22, and the average attendance has been about 50. What a waste.

The Forest Theater desperately needs your support. We need local businesses to talk up the theater as the thing to do in Carmel. About 5,000 tourists per week-end are looking for something to do but, for some reason, the Forest Theater remains the best kept secret in town.

Please, talk it up. Break those tickets out of the bottom drawer and get them in the hands of those people that support your business. Or use a ticket or two yourself and then speak first-hand about how good the play was.

Neither the CBA nor the Forest Theater can afford to be apathetic about this. Time is running short. Just do it!

Buster Newton, a resident of Carmel, is a volunteer with the Forest Theater.

ain; 13 in Sweden; 91 in Switzerland; 87 in Japan; 10 in Australia; and, 68 in Canada. But, that very same year, handguns claimed the lives of 10,567 Americans.

Out of touch

The gun lobby is dangerously out of touch, out of touch with all Americans and even with the very people they claim to represent — the gun owners. They refuse to accept the fact that most people favor common-sense approaches to decreasing the gun carnage in America. National public opinion polls show near unanimous support for the Brady Bill. And, a recent USA Today survey showed that even 60 percent of gun owners favor a ban on assault weapons.

We need a comprehensive response to this national disgrace:

• We must pass the Brady Bill.

First introduced in 1987, the Brady Bill requires a gun buyer to undergo a background check and five business day waiting period. California has a strong law of its own, but it is not enough. Without uniform national legislation, the San Francisco gunman was able to hop across the border to Nevada, use a fake address to purchase his two weapons of destruction and return to cast another violent shadow over the Golden State.

• We must pass legislation banning semi-automatic assault weapons.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum's Semiautomatic Assault Weapons Violence Protection Act would ban military-style assault weapons like the one used in San Francisco, guns designed to do one thing — kill a lot of people in a short period of time. It would complement California's law by giving the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) the ability to ban seven additional weapons, large ammunition magazines and copy-cat versions of already-banned weapons.

• We must pass legislation tightening licensing requirements for firearm dealers.

Although public safety depends upon the behavior of our 287,000 gun dealers, they are, for the most part, unregulated and unaccountable. In fact, more than three-quarters of these licensees are "kitchen-table" dealers who operate from their homes, without the necessary oversight of federal, state and local authorities. Sen. Paul Simon's Gun Dealer Licensing Reform Act will give ATF the tools it needs to conduct adequate background checks on prospective licensees and to ensure that licenses are only granted to bona fide businesses and that dealers comply with all state and local licensing and zoning requirements.

What are we waiting for? The American people have spoken with their voices and their lives. They want this violence to end. It is time for the U.S. Senate to answer the call, muster the courage and act with conviction to get these weapons off our streets and out of our schools.

To John Scully and the others who died at 101 California Street — we must do this in your name.

'I am going to continue to be active in local government, and if I find a position that I think I should serve, I'll go for it.'

'...this whole election was a learning process. To pinpoint any one thing is difficult. Do I look back and ask, 'Should have done this or that differently?' No.'

'...had we another few days, I would have decisively won this election. I think 30 to 40 votes per day were coming in my direction.'

The Pine Cone's Q & A with Jeff Davi

FOLLOWING a brief vacation and a chance to reflect on his narrow defeat to Sam Karas at the polls Aug. 3, Jeff Davi is refreshed and back at work at his Monterey real estate office.

He was also ready to discuss his recent experience as candidate for 5th District supervisor. The Carmel Pine Cone featured a similar question-and-answer interview last week with Karas, who was sworn in Tuesday, Aug. 10.

At 25, Davi characterizes his political prospects as wide-open, but, he says, nothing is in the works for now.

Pine Cone: One year ago, could you have envisioned you would ever have such an experience? What has this election been like for you on a personal level?

Jeff Davi: One year ago, I did not have this on the agenda, so to speak. However, I was very involved in politics. But I would have never guessed that I'd be running for supervisor against Sam Karas and we would come down to a cliff-hanging election that would be decided the Friday after an election eve.

Pine Cone: You said you were involved a year ago in politics. Fill in our readers, who may only know you as "the newcomer."

Davi: I was on the Board of Realtors as their chairman of the local government relations committee, and I was appointed to the Economic Development Task Force in the City of Marina. That task force is still in effect and I am still a member. I was appointed to the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. I also serve on the Monterey Bay Water Coalition, a watchdog for the water district.

Then there is the Affordable Housing Steering Committee. The goal is to create a clearinghouse for affordable housing issues. We are planning a symposium for late fall.

Pine Cone: You recall the numbers after the June 8 primary. People in the press, and probably even your good friends, were telling you that you had a tremendous uphill battle. Something had to have happened. It appears many people who voted for Sam and Fran (Farina) voted for you. What happened?

Davi: People told me, 'You don't have a chance.' But our goal was not to take the Farina vote; our goal was simply to continue the same campaign we started in the primary. We just kept chipping away at the core Karas voters and all of those who were upset with the current leadership — which are a portion of those people who voted for Fran Farina, David Hendrick and the others.

Pine Cone: Name-recognition, you have said many times, was your big problem...

Davi: And Sam's biggest plus.

In fact, I think it was Karin Strasser Kauffman's reason for not running against Sam. That's why we had to keep those signs up — to get that exposure.

Pine Cone: What you were fearing apparently did not happen — you were not pigeonholed in the voter's mind as a candidate only from a certain constituency — the Realtors, or developers or business...

Davi: That definitely was a concern. There were statements thrown out, 'He is a developer. He is going to pave everything.' I had to deal with all of this. But I was not pigeonholed. And it wasn't that the other candidates just let it go by; I got the support from school teachers, from unions, from local business people, from home-makers.

Pine Cone: Your campaign manager Bob Gutrin said something to this effect, 'We've seen the evolution of a political force.' That implies a political future. Is there one?

Davi: Well, I don't have anything in the works. But when you do this much work on a political campaign, and you are looking after the best interests of this community, it's incumbent upon everyone to realize I'm not going anywhere. I am going to continue to be active in local government, and if I find a position that I think I should serve, I'll go for it.

Pine Cone: Monterey City Council?

Davi: No, as I have said before, there are some concerns with my family's involvement with local real estate holdings here.

I would be concerned about having to step down on many votes.

What's more, I believe that the leadership here in Monterey is coming around to realize we need a balance, and I don't know if there is a major need (for me to run). I do believe that the county has such a need.

Pine Cone: Here is a difficult question for you. Can you say something good about Sam Karas?

Davi: That's not a difficult question — He's a very nice man.

Everyone I have ever met has said that, and it's true. Even I know him to be a very nice man... yes, he's very cordial.

Davi requests recount

JEFF DAVI has requested a recount of the more than 18,000 votes that led to the 5th District supervisorial candidate's defeat by a mere dozen ballots. Davi earned 9,189 votes to Karas' 9,201.

"I feel an obligation to the voters... to confirm the results and assure that every ballot submitted is properly reviewed and tabulated," Davi said.

At roughly a quarter per vote, the recount, set to begin Monday, Aug. 17, could cost nearly $5,000.

County Registrar Brad Clark certified the election Friday, Aug. 6 with what was, in effect, a computerized recount. Eight people from the elections department will spend a full day or more hand-counting the ballots.

Clark will have final say on any ballot the Davi campaign intends to challenge. "If they don't like it, they can always take it to court," Clark said.

Some 137 ballots were declared invalid, but few, if any, according to Clark, present much "gray area" for challenge. According to Clark, some voters had punched both candidates' names; others voted for neither. There were people who voted twice, or who didn't sign their absentee ballots.

*Interview by Paul Wolf
Photos by Scott Brearton*

Pine Cone: ...And he didn't pull any fast ones in the campaign, did he?

Davi: Nothing worth noting. Nothing we couldn't deal with.

Pine Cone: What does Jeff Davi still have to learn?

Davi: As I said, this whole election was a learning process. To pinpoint any one thing is difficult. Do I look back and ask, 'Should we have done this or that differently?' No. I think our volunteers did a wonderful job. I think as a candidate, I did a wonderful job — that is, in the time we had.

Time was important to me, and the only way I could get support was to meet people. We were gaining momentum every day, and had we another few days, I would have decisively won this election. I think 30 to 40 votes per day were coming in my direction.

Pine Cone: You seemed to evoke a lot of strong emotion — whether great apprehension or great hopes. Why was there such an intensity of feeling?

Davi: I don't know if it was just me, or the timing of the election in general.

We just had the Presidential election last year. We had the Congressional election this year. There was a theme of change, and then the question of, 'Is this change working?' And then we had a local election that directly affects the people of this community, and it was well-publicized.

We charged up a lot of people who normally wouldn't get involved. We might have triggered some people to get apprehensive. There was a lot of noise. But then again, we had some really good debates on the issues.

Pine Cone: Some people began to view the Karas-Davi race as a classic liberal-conservative battle. Is this accurate?

Davi: The board of supervisors is non-partisan. And, yes, everyone knows I am a Republican. When I am talking about conservative issues — taxes, efficiency in government, law enforcement — I am talking about 'fiscally-conservative' issues.

You have a large Democratic constituency here, since many people are concerned about the social issues, and those are valid concerns. But today, in 1993, we have to have someone in there who can hold the hard line and say, 'Let's stop this.' Let's quit taxing businesses out of the Monterey Peninsula and the State of California.

I was driving up in Lake County the other day and I saw a sign that said, 'Let's make welfare as hard to get as a use permit,' and it was a guy running for state senator. It dawned on me that we need some of that thinking.

This was not a partisan contest. But had it been, it is clear that people would have been voting across party lines.

Staging of Stoppard play will benefit Cherry Center

By JOHN DETRO

CHERRY CENTER for the Arts will offer a special benefit performance of Tom Stoppard's The Real Thing at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 12, with all proceeds benefitting that site.

Tickets for the benefit cost $15 apiece and may be obtained by calling 624-7491. Cherry Hall is located, of course, at Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel.

The play opened last Friday and will continue through Aug. 22 — 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, Sundays at 7 p.m. For regular performance reservations, call 655-3200.

In the 1984 Tony-winning show, Stoppard turns his attention to an old topic: love. Originally starring Jeremy Irons, the play moves through layers of deceptive appearances by characters who excel at stylish duplicity — actors, theater directors, writers.

The local director is Conrad Selvig.

AREA PRODUCER Carol Loyd will stage her First Annual Comedy Fest at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 15, in Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum.

Her maiden voyage will feature funnywomen Kathy Buckley, Diana Jordan and Sheri Glaser — all enjoy strong national reputations — and television/film actor George Jenesky as master of ceremonies. Actress Peggie Reyna from Days of Our Lives is an activist who'll bring thoughtful material.

Seating will be open and tickets cost $25 per. Advance ducats may be found at Thunderbird Books, Bookworks, Monterey Coffeehouse Bookstore, Portofino Cafe. Proceeds will aid Concerned Citizens for Environmental Health (655-4921).

Jordan was named among this country's top five female comics by Joan Rivers. Buckley is the first hearing impaired standup comic to hit national TV and the club circuit. Glaser hides out in Carmel Valley when not touring with her hilarious one-woman shows.

"Getting it together has been a delight," says Loyd. "We're looking forward to offering a yearly edition."

AND HERE'S another Tony winner.

Funny Girl — the music-filled story of comedienne Fanny Brice — will be presented by MPC Theater Company at the college's Main Stage facility. Dates: Thursday, Aug. 12, through Sept. 4.

Terry Barto directs and choreographs this version. It stars Laura Akard, Jose Lambert, Gail Howard, Harrison Shields and Michael Pina. Barney Hulse is the musical director.

The show will start at 8 p.m. Fridays/Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Reservations are available via the Theater Alliance — 655-3200. Tickets also may be bought at MPC Box Office between 4 and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday during the run.

(Tickets purchased in advance carry a discount price of $8 for general admission, students, military, seniors. Prices of tickets purchased the day of performance are $16 and $11.50. Children 12 years and younger get in for $7.)

The hit Broadway musical was propelled by music and lyrics from Jule Styne and Bob Merrill — People as well as Second Hand Rose and My Man and Don't Rain on My Parade. Barbra Streisand won an Oscar for her starring role in the 1968 film version.

WESTERN STAGE is doing a Chekov comedy masterpiece — Uncle Vanya — through Sept. 5 at Hartnell College Performing Arts Center's Studio Theater.

Single and discount tickets to this offering now are on sale — 1-755-6816.

The laughs in the adaptation are accented via the reworking by playwright and screenwriter David Mamet. Vlada Chernomirdik's translation into English originally was produced by American Repertory Theater of Massachusetts.

Guest Actor's Equity performer Julian Lopez-Morillas heads an impressive cast as Dr. Astrov.

Arts & Leisure

WESTERN STAGE will offer Maury Yeston and Arthur Kopit's Phantom — a terrifying and beautiful Phantom of the Opera variation — at Hartnell College Performing Arts Center Aug. 20 through Sept. 5. Single and discount tickets now are available — 1-755-6816. Here we see Dan Johnson as The Phantom Ghost and Elizabeth Schultz as his young protege.

County Fair readies 1993 run

BIG FUN looms right around the corner as Monterey County Fair gets ready to open its doors at, of course, the sprawling fairgrounds.

This year's edition will open Tuesday, Aug. 17, and run through Aug. 22.

The 1993 theme: Strawberries, Squeals and Ferris Wheels. (The fair will celebrate the 100th birthday of the ferris wheel.)

Dignitaries from all over the county will join directors, staff and volunteers at two-hour opening day ceremonies sponsored by Monterey Kiwanis Club beginning at 8 a.m. The public is invited; everyone buying a ticket to the breakfast is welcome to attend the fair free on the first day.

The annual kick-off barbecue will be held Friday, Aug. 13, with the public invited here too. Admission ($10) includes a dinner of spit-roasted pork or chicken, dancing to the music of Eight Second Ride and a silent auction whose proceeds will benefit children's programs at the fair.

Those wishing to attend should send their checks (payable to Seventh District Agricultural Association) to Monterey Fairgrounds, 2004 Fairground Rd., Monterey 93940. A mailing address to which tickets should be sent must be included with the check.

Colorful exhibits

When it's in full swing, the fair will offer colorful exhibits, competitions and displays that have attracted crowds over the years. There will be name entertainment, community talent, carnival, kiddie carnival and — at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 21 — the Junior Livestock Auction.

Stage shows are free with admission. Topmost acts: The Lettermen (Aug. 17), Stevie B (Aug. 18), Boy Howdy (Aug. 19), Desert Rose Band (Aug. 20), Tower of Power (Aug. 21) and The Drifters (Aug. 22).

"Folks don't have to worry about missing anything," says Monterey County Fair spokesperson Deborah Warren. "Very detailed scheduled will be handed out as they come past the front gates."

Tom Millea schedules free Sunset photography lecture

SUNSET CENTER'S Room 16 is the place. Tom Millea will offer a no-cost lecture on Platinum-Palladium Photography at 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 14.

That process uses long exposure on fine paper to create a deep and rich finish. Millea enjoys a global reputation for his knowledge of the complex medium.

The event will make ample room for discussion. It's part of the Virginia Morse Art History Lectures — sponsored by Carmel Adult School and Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation.

CARMEL BUSINESS Association announces more special events in connection with the local Art Walk. (Each Friday through September, more than 40 of the city's galleries and studios stay open from 6 until 9 p.m. to welcome visitors.) On Aug. 13, then—

• Balyon Gallery (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth). During the Art Walk, Andre

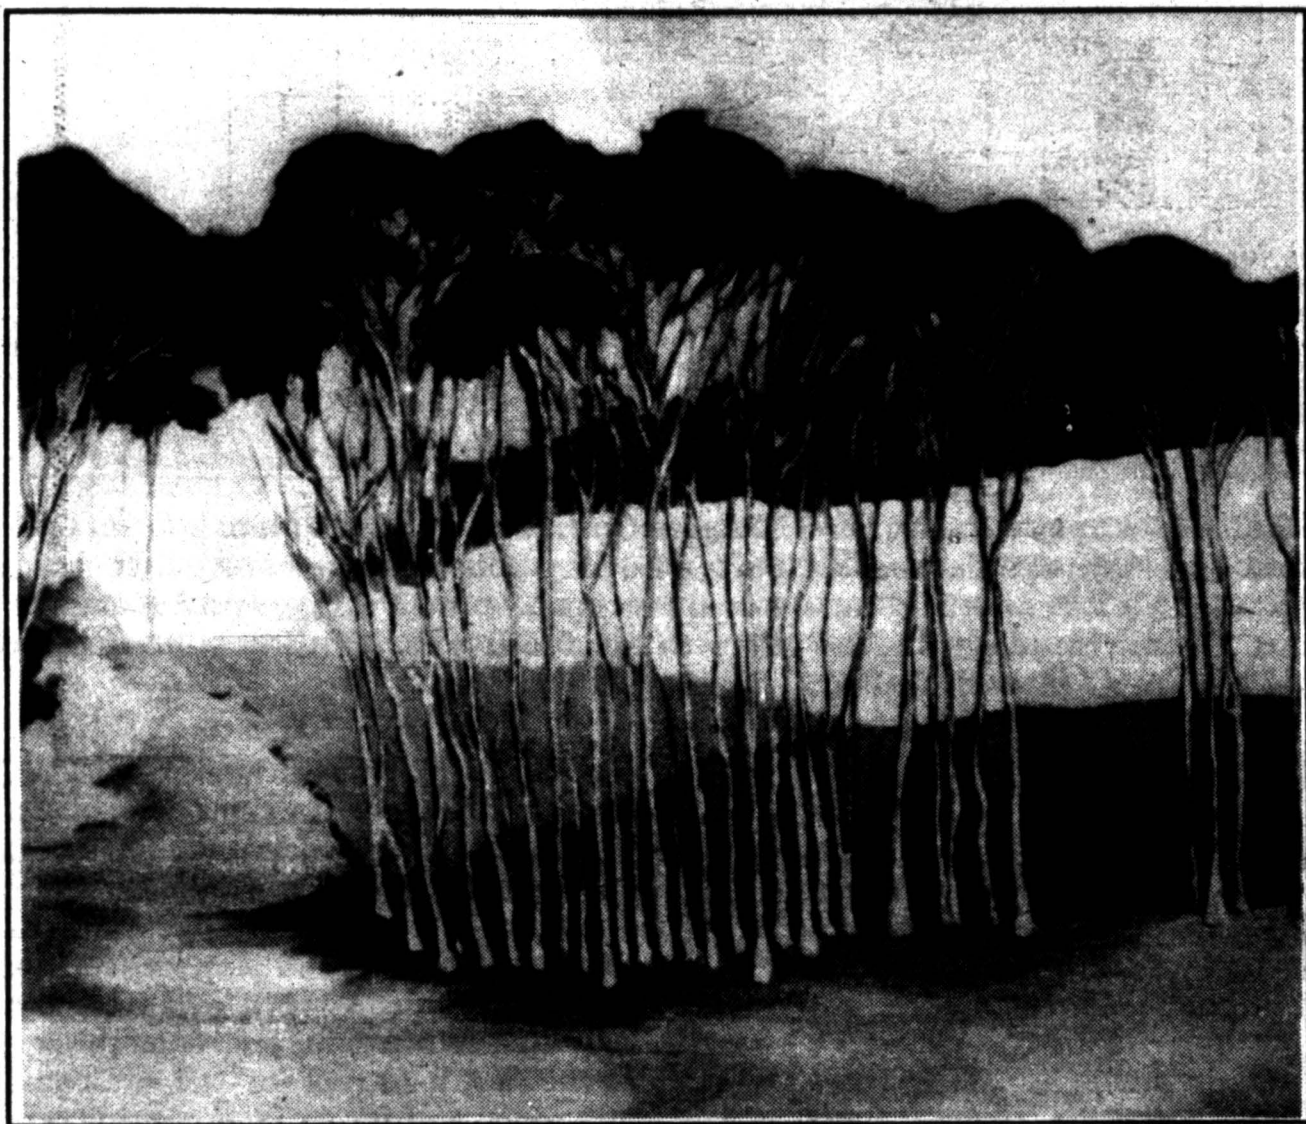

Balyon will give a demonstration of the etching/printing process on his own press. His etchings are in the private collections of Queen Beatrix and former President George Bush, among other luminaries.

• Lilliana Bralco Gallery (Sixth between Dolores and Lincoln). Do you have questions about home decorating and art? Artist/Designer Bralco will be on hand to discuss interiors. Ongoing.

• Thomas Metcalf Gallery (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth). Come at 7 p.m. for a participatory demonstration of painting to music. "Or simply observe and enjoy."

• G.H. Rothe Gallery (Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh). Close look at the studio of artist Rothe and her world of mezzotint ("the most difficult engraving technology").

At her gold-plated copper plates too. Ongoing video.

By Carmel Valley's Ethel Alvy:
at Seaside City Hall Gallery.

A PUBLIC reception with refreshments will be held at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 13, for Carmel Valley painter Ethel Alvy at Seaside City Hall Gallery.

The 90-minute occasion notes that her works are being exhibited there through Aug. 31.

"Her paintings have a strong sense of place," says the sponsoring Seaside Art Commission. "Although she has a realist style, her haunting landscapes often verge on abstraction."

Meanwhile, those commissioners announce that they will present a symposium with Dr. Leonard Rosen at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26, at the same gallery space.

"He will examine the relationships and meanings of symbols in drawings, paintings, sculpture, representational and modern art, other media. This will be of value to those who are interested in the psychology of art."

The program is aided by Monterey

County Cultural Council. Refreshments will be served.

ANSEL ADAMS Center in San Francisco assigns these dates to a show entitled Brett Weston: The Last Portfolio — Sept. 11 through Oct. 24.

A former resident hereabouts, Weston died in Hawaii in January of this year.

"Brett was a founder of The Friends of Photography and a staunch advocate of a straightforward photographic style derived in part from his father, Edward," the Center announcement says.

"The photographs of lava and leaves in his final portfolio demonstrate his talent for finding beautiful abstract forms within commonplace elements of nature. The works are a gift to The Friends of Photography from George F. Jewett, Jr. — in observance of Weston's contribution to the medium."

Center address is 250 Fourth St., San Francisco.

Stoppard play draws strength from top local cast

By JAMES P. KINNEY

THE COMFORTING clarity that theater can bring to life's complexities and absurdities is markedly absent in the plays of prolific English playwright Tom Stoppard.

In Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1966), he turns the world's best known tragedy inside out and follows two of Shakespeare's decidedly minor characters around Elsinore as they forlornly (and humorously) try to escape feelings of the absurdity of their situation and their own irrelevance.

In Jumpers (1972), Stoppard continues to examine the ambiguities and confusions modern man finds around him once he rejects traditional moral values and accepted religious convictions. Born-again Christians — indeed, fundamentalist thinkers of any persuasion, Stoppard suggests — have it made.

In a local production of Stoppard's The Real Thing which opened at Carmel's Cherry Hall this past weekend, director Conrad Selvig and a talented local cast struggle manfully (and womanfully, of course) to make sense out of Stoppard's brilliant theatrical exploration of the ambiguities, struggles and pitfalls of romantic and sexual love in a world short on convictions.

No commitments?

"There are no commitments any more," one of the characters mourns. "Only bargains." That, succinctly, defines the theme of this play — the search for love as the genuine article.

Henry (Kevin Hanstick) is a successful playwright who incorporates the same confusions and anxieties into his plays that exist in his personal life. In fact, the lives of all the characters — each somehow involved in theater — mirror what happens in his plays.

This confusion, it eventually dawns on one, is intentional. From the start it is difficult to figure out whether we are watching a scene in the lives of Henry's friends, acquaintances and lovers or a scene from one of his plays.

Annie (Eleanor Wyde), an actress, his mistress, later his wife, doesn't make it any easier for him. She gets involved with Brodie (Jim Alter), a violence-prone activist who has written a clumsy play. She asks Henry to "fix it up," and make it suitable for staging.

"But he doesn't know how to write," walls Henry. There are love scenes between Annie and Billy (David Vega). Are we watching a scene from Brodie's play or from real life? Result: confusion, sometimes funny, sometimes annoying — life and theater so closely mirrored it is hard to tell them apart.

Paradox, puns, illusion

And all through this, Stoppard's incredible facility with language — contradictions, puns, paradoxes, illusions.

Henry and Charlotte's (Marlie Avant's) teenage daughter (Ivy Cates) appears briefly with a short jolt of reality. It doesn't last.

Max (Conrad Selvig), another actor, drops by now and then, and bemusedly stirs Henry's bubbling Angst Stew.

Yet, this being Stoppard, there is nothing solemn about the action, of course. Psychological sleights of humor abound.

Maybe because of the Cherry's limited space, I found some scene transitions

SHARING A scene in the MPC Theater Company production of Funny Girl are Laura Akard and Jose Lambert, who play comedienne Fanny Brice and gambler Nick Arnstein. The musical starts at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays in the Main Stage facility at Monterey Peninsula College (Aug. 12-29). Call 655-3200 for reservations.

distracting. The play seems to demand instant movement from one scene to another.

The sets, by Selvig and Avant, are adequate, but some scenes must be played against a front curtain. I felt, alas, that continuity suffered.

Strongest performance

The evening's strongest performance belonged to Wyde, now enticing, now brittle, now supportive, now bitchy, her changes in hair style and mood adding to Henry's dilemma.

Hanstick carried off the main role well enough, though his bewilderment seems at times to be his own, not his character's.

Marlie Avant, uncharacteristically, appeared somewhat uneasy in her role. Jim Alter, in a very short appearance as Brodie near the end of play, delivered a splendid blue collar Brit revolutionary, his rough mannerisms and dialect a slap-in-the-face contrast to the educated ditherings and fussbudgetry of the others.

The Real Thing plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 7 p.m. through August 22. For tickets, call Alliance Box Office, 655-3200.

Just a block from Union Square

Montreux Jazz Festival offers widest sort of variety

(Editor's note: The writer is a film and sound technician and parttime Carmel resident. Here is the first of two parts.)

By DAVID KOEHLER

SITTING ON the fourth floor balcony, I watch in amazement as a lightning storm moves in out of the Alps and across Lake Geneva directly towards the hotel. It's midnight and soon the rain will be pouring down.

By 4 a.m. the entire town will be awakened by the pounding thunder and extreme bursts of lightening. Being awake all night is not that unusual, this time of year.

Every July for the past 27 years, residents and visitors alike have been treated to some of the world's best music at the Montreux Jazz Festival. What began as an annual celebration of American Jazz has now grown to include everything from Brazilian to Blues; film scores to Funk.

Great care

Carefully orchestrated since its creation by the Swiss Claude Nobs, and for the past three years in collaboration with Quincy Jones, the festival is truly a full plate. In previous years Quincy has delivered his Be-Bop to Hip-Hop retrospective including L.A. rappers and the now-cherished Miles Davis big band concert featuring the arrangements of Gil Evans (recorded at the '91 festival and soon to be released on CD by Warner Brothers).

My wife and I are fortunate to be attending the final 10 days of the 15-day offering. The main events take place this year in the new Congress Center. Located on the lake's shore it contains two venues: the 2,000-seat Stravinsky Theater, a cherrywood panelled auditorium reminiscent of Alice Tully Hall, and a large open room known as "New Q's" which has mostly standing room for about 1,500.

Free events

There are hundreds of free concerts throughout town in the parks and at the Casino, the festival's original location. All points of interest are within a 20 minute walk along the flower-lined promenade that borders the lake. Like Carmel, Montreux is at once peaceful and breathtaking.

Every night has a theme: Verve Night with Santana, Jazz Power, Gala Night with Barbara Hendricks, like that. You can also count on many surprises — last minute bookings, cancellations, and artists who happen to be in the audience being pulled into the spotlight for unexpected duets. The Rev. Al Green, for example, coaxed Johnny Gil out of the crowd to help with his big finish.

This year's headliners included the European songstress Ute Lemper, who prowled the stage evoking pre-war memories of Marlene Dietrich and Edith Piaf. She sang in German, French, and English, at one point climbing onto the piano to stand defiantly or lie on her back puffing a cigarette.

She was accompanied nicely by her small string orchestra which included an accordion, of course.

Opening the show entitled Vive La France was the venerable Stephane Grappelli and his trio. Still going very strong in his 80s, Grappelli entranced the audience with his big, clear violin tone and unquestioned command of Swing which the world has been privileged to enjoy since his days at the Le Hot Club in Paris in the '30s.

The Right Rev. Al Green said, "It's 1 a.m. so we might as well just jam this thing into the ground" and that's exactly what he did. Eventually taking off his jacket and shoes, he stood at the front of the stage singing without his microphone — and undoubtedly being heard in the back of the VIP balcony.

He jumped down off the stage twice for extended tours throughout the audience with a cordless mike and was thoroughly mobbed and handled by the now frenzied crowd.

Rambling set

Chaka Khan, on the other hand, turned in a disappointing and rambling set. A few times she inexplicably walked off stage, midsong, causing the show to grind to a halt. Even a surprise guest appearance and solo by rock guitarist Todd Rundgren failed to revive the now terminal performance.

The Ramsey Lewis Quintet opened the evening entitled Soul and Jazz with an hour and a half of tasteful, dignified acoustic jazz. Seated behind the nine-foot concert Steinway, Lewis delivered a thoughtful and impressive exploration of many of his fondly remembered hits.

Hailing from Chicago, the excellent band, featuring Henry Johnson on guitar, also did some serious justice to the blues. All in all it was a festival highlight.

Montreux is nothing if not educational. Soon came the Night of Film Music and everyone was in for several wonderful surprises.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Terry

SEASIDE'S ANNUAL Jazz/Art Show always has had a certain flair and sense of adventure. The 1993 edition — scheduled on Saturday night, Sept. 11 — is dedicated to the late music activist and vibes player Bill Jackson. Obviously, some extra effort was made.

The show committee and Dave Pacheco of Seaside Community Services announce that the star of the evening at Oldemeyer Center will be none other than Terry Gibbs. That's right — the great vibes man and Dream Big Band leader.

Also on the bill will be the trio fronted by pianist Smith Dobson. And vocalizing spouse Gail Dobson. Dave: "We wanted someone special. Smith was very helpful as the desired booking became reality."

The event will include an art show and refreshments along with the jazz sets. Proceeds will benefit a youth scholarship program named after Bill.

Tickets cost $15 (advance) or $20 at the door. They're available at Oldemeyer Center and the free Sunday concerts at Laguna Grande Park.

Concert stars on Aug. 15 will be outstanding jazz vocalist Madeline Eastman and the Ace Hill Trio. These family-type events run from 1 until 5 p.m.

Saying goodbye

Jazz has lost one of its finest pianists and a wondrous composer. Kenny Drew died earlier this month in Denmark. Age 64.

While a United States resident, Drew worked with the likes of Lester Young, Bird Parker, Dexter Gordon, Chet Baker, Dinah Washington, Paul Chambers, Philly Joe Jones.

He recorded successful albums for Orrin Keepnews at Riverside Records in the late 1950s and moved to Europe in 1961. Orrin wrote: "When Drew removed himself from the scene, largely to escape what are usually cautiously described as 'personal problems,' a great deal of musical potential was also removed."

Be that as it may, Drew helped turn Copenhagen into a jazz center and wrote dozens upon dozens of absolutely beautiful tunes. By me, his ballads are right up there with those of Tadd Dameron and Monk. Absolutely haunting stuff.

Examples of the man's work are on an Original Jazz Classics re-release package put together by Keepnews (Riverside 1988). Here his '50s mates include Donald Byrd, Wilbur Ware, Hank Mobley.

Drew also contributes pianistics and a superb composition (for the late drummer Kenny Clarke) to the Paris Reunion Band LP with Woody Shaw, Nat Adderley, Joe Henderson, Jimmy Woode, others. This Stockholm session was picked up from Sonet Records and put out domestically by Gazell Productions of New England (1988).

Thank God that the late artist's son — pianist Kenny Drew, Jr. — plays the compositions regularly and lovingly on high-quality CDs that do them justice.

Plenty of activity

Doc Ricketts' Lab near Cannery Row has the James Harman Blues Band coming in on Tuesday night, Aug. 17. Cover of $4.

Next evening, it's guitarist Frank Gambale ($8) followed by Blue Oyster Cult ($15) on Aug. 22. Austin guitarist Chris Duarte hits the stage on Aug. 25 ($4). Call 649-4241.

Pacific Grove's Portofino Cafe offers some jazz programming later this month — the acoustic stylings of Jack and Jenny (Aug. 26). Brazilian jazz from pianist Osmar Milito and the Nick Williams Trio (Aug. 27). afternoon Jazz Jam as a Portofino fundraiser (Aug. 29). vocalist Mary Ann Randl with Martan Mann (Aug. 30). And of course the no-cost Mixed Jazz Bag of guitarist Joseph Lucido and friends continues on Sunday evenings.

Information: 373-7370.

At Kuumbwa

Vocalist Rebecca Paris has a recording collaboration with vibist Gary Burton due out early next year. Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz will present her on Monday night, Aug. 16. Eight o'clock kick; $12 advance or $14 at the door.

The Latin jazz band called Alegria will be there on Friday night, Aug. 13 — percussionist Steve Robertson. Rob Lautz on vibes, pianist Murray Low, percussionist Norman Smith, Mark Hammersly on bass. It's $5 per — at the door only.

New piano festival opens on quite a beautiful note

By DIANA DAMITZ

THE TONG-IL Han Piano Institute's 1993 Summer Piano Festival opened Sunday night at Keck Auditorium at the Robert Louis Stevenson School at Pebble Beach with the first in a series of free piano recitals.

The pianist was Ralph Votapek, who sprang to fame as the Gold Medal winner of the First Van Cliburn International Piano Competition in 1962.

Since then, he has maintained a busy concert career, especially in Europe and South America where he has a fanatically devoted following. He was on the juries of the Eighth and Ninth Van Cliburn Competitions in 1989 and 1993, and also served as one of two America judges at the most recent Tchaikovsky Piano Competition in Moscow in 1990.

Votapek opened the Festival with a beautifully performed, well-balanced program that set a high level of expectation for the concerts to come during the rest of this week. Votapek's performance of Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 7, immediately revealed the pianist as an artist enjoying full mastery of his mature powers.

Intelligent performer

Beethoven composed the Op. 7 at the age of 26, but was already a formidable composer. From the first moments of the opening theme, Votapek proved himself an intelligent and sympathetic performer of Beethoven.

The slow Largo, con gran espressione was passionate and beautifully shaped. The Minore of the third movement, one of Beethoven's several experiments in sonority in the Sonata, was exciting and vibrant, as was the C minor theme of the final Rondo, a whirlwind of sound in Votapek's hands. Fine control of musical line and rhythmic drive made this Beethoven performance highly satisfying.

The Chopin group continued on this high plane. The Nocturne in C Minor had both beautiful tone and a sense of inevitability. His care of the arching line was shown, for example, in this performance of the octave passages. They are heard first muttering, then blistering, but always subordinate to the forward direction.

The Tarantelle, a light piece, was a romp, and well-placed between the Nocturne and the Barcarolle, which closed the first half. Let it be said that Votapek is a performer capable of understanding and projecting the combined masculine tension and tenderness of the glorious Barcarolle, one of Chopin's greatest composition.

Second half

The second half of the program opened with the Sonata (1918) by the America composer Charles Griffes. This piece is a large one-movement work with merged sonata elements.

Here the artist seemed if anything in even more relaxed and sympathetic musical control. In this romantic, sometimes quasi-impressionistic composition, everything was clear and logical, and at turns meditative and virtuosic.

Selections from Book 11 of Albeniz' masterpiece — Iberia — closed the program. The three pieces, Rodena, Almeria and Triana, feature Spanish rhythms contrasting with song-like sections. They contain formidable technical obstacles which Votapek dispatched with ease.

Votapek further delighted the appreciative audience, which contained a considerable number of Korean participants in the Institute, by playing several encores from the Gershwin Songbook. These were simply dazzling.

According to Director Yong-Il Han and Assistant Director Lyn Bronson, current plans are for the Summer Piano Festival to become an annual event on the Monterey Peninsula.

There will be more free recitals at Keck Auditorium.

On Thursday evening, Aug. 12, the artist will be award-winner Adam Wodnicki.

On Friday and Saturday, Aug. 13-14, students will play.

Montreux scene and film music

The stage was filled by the National Orchestra from Lille, a 100-member French traveling symphony. They were conducted through a series of 23 excerpts of film music by Quincy Jones and the fantastic Michel Legrand, who treated us to many of his ravishing film themes.

Legrand also sang. He was joined in this endeavor by relatively unknown L.A. studio singer Tata Vega. Her voice is an instrument of incredible wealth and artistry. Another of Quincy's discoveries.

The next evening — billed as Jazz Meets the Symphony — was no less of a revelation. It was time for the world premiere of George Duke's Muir Woods Suite.

Stanley too

Seated at the piano in front of the orchestra, Duke was joined by the phenomenal Stanley Clarke on bass, Brazilian percussionist Paolino Da Costa and Chester Thompson on drums.

The result was astounding. The gathered fortunate witnessed the birth of the next great American composer. It's not stretching the point to compare this work with that of Duke Ellington and Aaron Copland. The well conceived orchestration and series of lyrical and evocative solos created an enchanting triumph that was received by a spontaneous and roaring standing ovation. No small feat for the predominantly local and more conservative crowd this night.

In our interview, Duke revealed that, growing up in Marin County, he would camp in Muir Woods as a child and was inspired by the power and majesty of the forest.

This piece represents his impressions of the mystery and reverence to be found in a grove of redwoods — a feeling shared, I'm sure, by many on the Monterey Peninsula.

Officials remind:

County Fair includes free shuttle service

As for getting there, fair officials say: "The easiest way is to park at Monterey Peninsula College and take the free shuttle." There also will be free bus service from downtown Monterey's transit plaza to the fair.

Prices told

Admission: $6 (adults), $5 (seniors 65 and over), $2 (children 6-12), free for youngsters six and under. Free to uniformed military.

Special days are Kid's Day on Aug. 18 when youngsters 12 and under can get in free, Special Friend's Day on Aug. 19 when mentally and physically challenged people are admitted free, Senior's Day on Aug. 20 with a special Senior Resource Fair, entertainment and lunch in the Pattee Arena.

Fair hours Tuesday through Friday are 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. (grounds) and 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. (buildings). Saturday and Sunday — 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. (grounds); 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. (buildings).

If you wish details before getting those schedules in hand, call 372-1000. Some Monterey County Fair highlights:

- Exhibit Supervisor Kate Violini says children will show an estimated 10,000 items — everything from farm animals to baked goods. Their involvement is an an all-time high, she adds, with that figure exceeding last year's by 10 percent.

- Opening ceremonies include the traditional pancake breakfast. "The 7th Infantry Division (Light) Band has performed at the breakfast since 1960," says Warren.

"Their performance this year holds special significance since it will be the last at the breakfast and quite possibly their last on the peninsula." Cost: $6 (adults) and $2 (children under 12).

- Scholarships worth $2,000 are available to young exhibitors and volunteers at the fair. A special committee will pick winners.

- Fair officials say carnival-goers can save much money by buying ride passes. Family bonus books may be purchased until Aug. 16 at the fairgrounds administration office — "no limit on the amount; no lines to wait out."

- Regarding the Junior Livestock Auction, you may place an order for buying an animal or get additional information by calling 372-5863.

- More than 1,500 children — 1,594, to be exact — entered the contest to design the 1993 fair theme poster. Winner was Salinas seventh grader Edgardo Rubio, who won $100 for his design and $50 for being selected best in his grade level.

New European bakery opening in Carmel

A EUROPEAN bakery will be opening Monday, Aug. 16 in downtown Carmel. Called Bäckerei (pronounced bake-ear-eye), the bakery will be located on the west side of Junipero between 5th and 6th streets.

In its current operation, Bäckerei provides all the bread, rolls and desserts for The General Store and The Forge in the Forest. It features Bavarian style breads and rolls baked by Christian Munzer from Austria. Jim Kaufman, pastry chef, is responsible for the cakes, cookies, pastries and special desserts.

In addition, both hot and cold beverages will be served at Bäckerei.

The bakery will be open daily from 7:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

DOUG KELLER, general manager of The General Store and Forge in the Forest, is flanked by Bäckerei's chief baker, Christian Munzer, and pastry chef Jim Kaufman. Bäckerei will be opening in downtown Carmel on Monday, Aug. 16.

Formula plot aside, 'The Fugitive' is gripping entertainment

By PAUL WOLF

SOMEWHERE NOT too far down the list of stock formulas for action films there lies the basic scenario for The Fugitive. It contains a plot outline so basic and familiar we wonder why we are so riveted to the screen.

In an age when inspiration and experimentation are increasingly rare in the movies, we turn to technique and professionalism.

These days, we tend more often to be dazzled by films than moved. So we have a slick, perfectly crafted thriller that captivates and even offers a few surprises along the way.

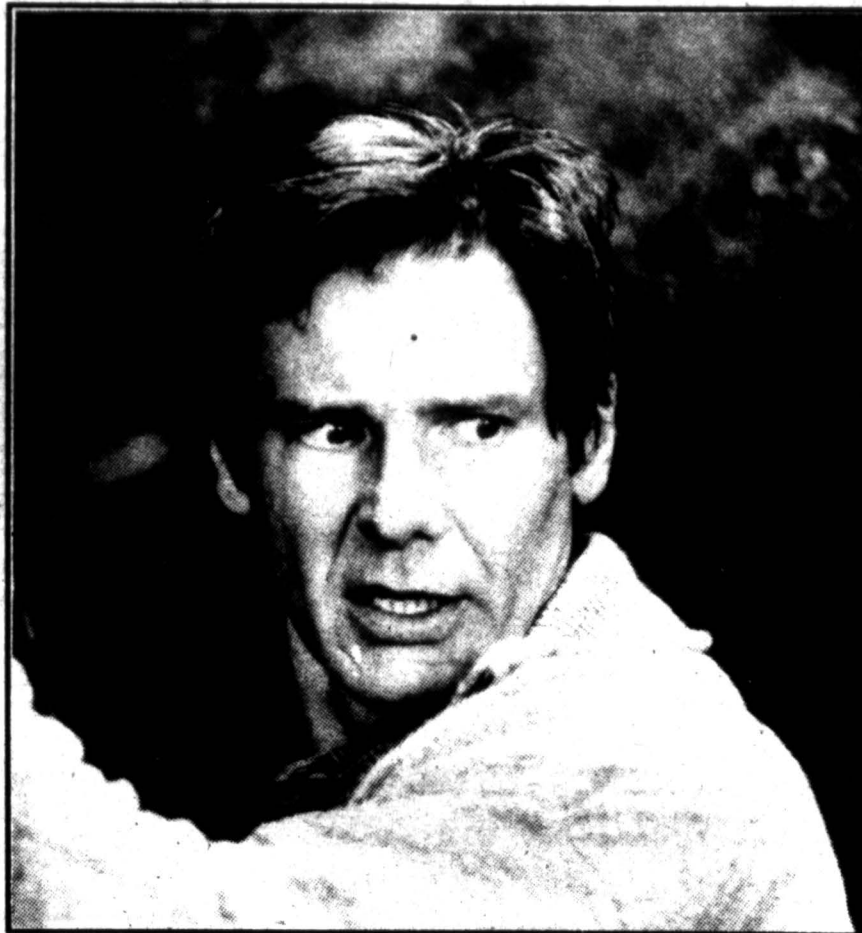

Bravo for good entertainment! Don't, however, expect to give The Fugitive thought the next day.

It does not belong to the same league of ambition as, say, In the Line of Fire, another summer thriller which travels through heavy psychological terrain.

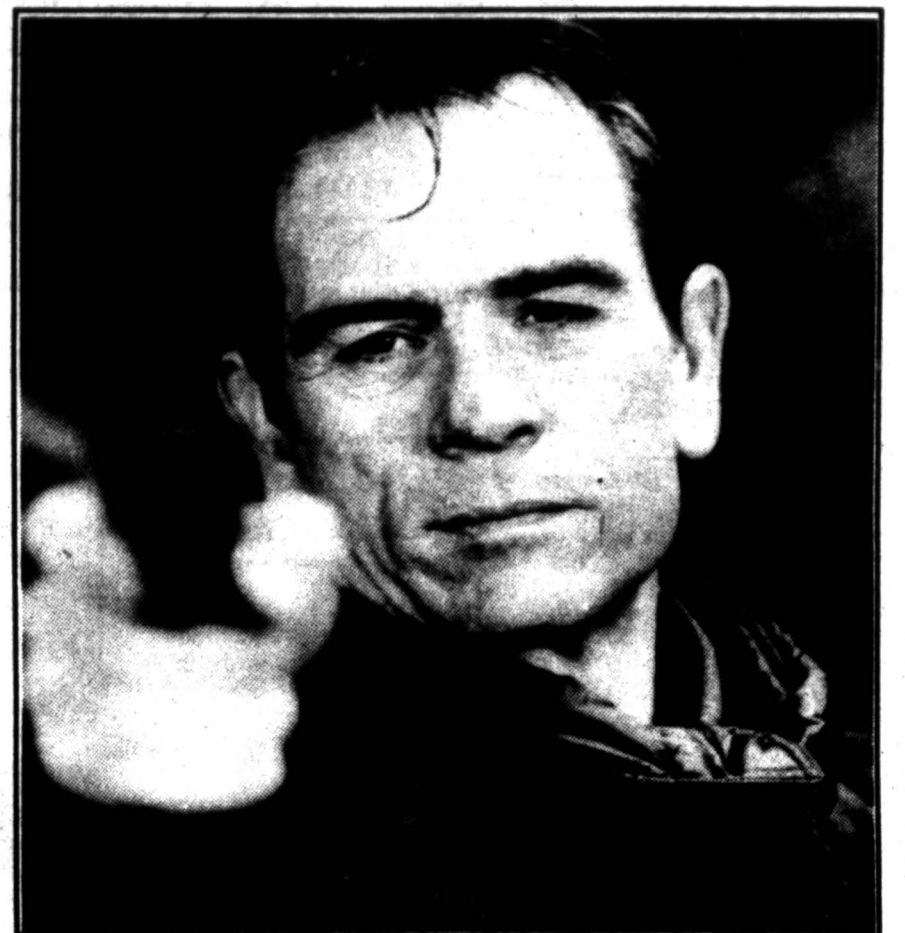

Cinematic creation

The details of the story are not actually new, since The Fugitive is a cinematic treatment of the 1960s television series by the same name and similarly surrounding Dr. Richard Kimble, falsely accused of killing his wife.

In this new package, we get solid work from actors Harrison Ford and Tommy Lee Jones, and from director Ford plays the respected surgeon who is tried, convicted and sentenced to death. He gets a freak chance at HARRISON FORD is Dr. Richard Kimble in The Fugitive. He is brilliant, honest — and accused of killing his wife.

TOMMY LEE JONES is the relentless U.S. marshal on Kimble's trail.

THE FUGITIVE

Director: Andrew Davis
Rating: ★★

escape, and soon he is tracked by bloodhounds and the aggressive U.S. Marshal's office, lead by Sam Gerard (Tommy Lee Jones).

Gerard is so ruthless in his quest to bring back a prisoner that we get the following exchange when Kimble and Gerard finally meet midway through the movie:

Kimble (desperately): "I didn't kill my wife."

Gerard (matter-of-factly): "I don't care."

A thriller is said to be only as good as its villain, but this one has a unique approach. It uses the obsessed Gerard — who is ruthless, but not a villain per se — as the foil to the protagonist. The true villain surfaces toward the end of the picture.

We know a few basic outcomes: First, Kimble will not be caught; second, he will have to find his wife's killer by himself.

Finally, it is not Kimble but Gerard who is challenged to undergo a psychological transformation. Does he have a human face under his flinty mask of determination?

We get some interesting and exciting interludes — first-rate chases, and even an opportunity for Dr. Kimble to save a life while his own is so endangered.

This is a far more interesting movie than one would extract from the trailers. And there is hardly a dull moment.

Type-casting Ford

Unfortunately, Ford — the star of Indiana Jones trilogy between 1981 and 1989, as well as a string of thrillers during that same period — reveals how close durability is to type-casting.

Other thrillers starring him during the 1980s owe their freshness to their unique scenarios: Blade Runner (1982) is eerie sci-fi; Witness (1985) has remarkable cross-cultural struggles concerning mainstream society and the Amish; In Frantic (1988), the actor, again playing a doctor finding out what happened to his wife, has to save his hide in a Parisian setting, all the while not speaking a word of French.

Ford did not need this one for his resume, but it doesn't diminish his career either because his performance is strong and convincing.

The Fugitive is straight-forward entertainment. If it is formula, that is only because it understands what we go to the movies for.

Public notices

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
CITY COUNCIL
ORDINANCE NO. 93-13

AN ORDINANCE ADOPTING MEASURES TO PROMOTE THE REDUCTION OF VEHICLE TRIPS, TRAFFIC CONGESTION, AIR POLLUTION AND TO IMPROVE PARKING AVAILABILITY

WHEREAS, State law establishing requirements for development of a County-wide Congestion Management Program (AB 471 and 1791) mandates adoption and implementation of Trip Reduction Ordinance; and

WHEREAS, generally increased traffic congestion contributes to significant deterioration in air quality, decreases in energy efficiency, and adversely impacts public and private sector economics due to reduced productivity of the work force; and

WHEREAS, various efforts underway included in the Congestion Management Program (CMP) recognize and encourage the use of Transportation Demand Management (TDM) strategies to increase mobility and improve the general efficiency of the transportation system by enhancing vehicle flow and shifting demand to different modes on existing transportation facilities; and

WHEREAS, implementation of TDM strategies at the local government level will provide significant public benefits by improving air quality, enhancing the effectiveness of the existing transportation system, improve parking availability, and reduce transportation energy requirements; and

WHEREAS, Transportation Demand Management strategies will assist in maintaining the Level of Service standards adopted for the county-wide road and transit systems; and

WHEREAS, continued receipt of Section 2105 state gas tax funds as well as eligibility for new federal Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality and Surface Transportation Program funds depend upon the timely adoption of a Trip Reduction Ordinance; and

WHEREAS, adoption of this ordinance will promote the public health, safety and general welfare both within the City and in the region.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section One. Add Section 17.34.100 as follows:

17.34.100 Trip Reduction Monitoring.

A. Annual Survey. Each applicant for first issuance or annual renewal of a City business license for a fixed place of business shall be provided with a Trip Reduction Survey form for the applicant's business. All municipal employees and employees of all businesses not required to have a business license, including but not limited to banks and insurance agencies, also shall be sent a Trip Reduction Survey form annually during the month of January. The exact form and content of the Trip Reduction Survey shall be specified by resolution of the Planning Commission and may be updated from time to time by subsequent resolution. At a minimum the Survey shall include spaces to collect the following information for each business on a voluntary basis:

- o business name, ownership, street location
- o mailing address and telephone number
- o number of parking spaces provided on site or through contractual arrangements
- o hours and days of operation
- o a Transportation Summary for each employee including management

The Transportation Summary for each employee should specify the following:

- o the business name and the employee's name or a confidential identification number,
- o the employee's typical work schedule,
- o the employee's City of residence,
- o the employee's usual mode of transportation to and from work.

In addition to this information, the transportation summary for each employee shall provide space where employees may request information on trip reduction programs. Employees also may request to participate in the regional carpool matching service. Businesses are not required to complete or return the surveys but are encouraged to do so. After two years of implementation, the provision of this Section shall become mandatory rather than voluntary if trip reduction goals specified below in Subsection C have not been met.

B. Use of Survey Information. The City shall use the information in the Trip Reduction Survey to document the extent of conformance with the goals of the Congestion Management Program as adopted by the Transportation Agency of Monterey County. The information also may be used to evaluate the success of Trip Reduction programs and to assist in developing new programs. At least once each calendar year, on or about the second regular meeting in January, the Planning Commission may review the transportation mode proportions for employees, determine Average Vehicle Ridership and forward a report to the City Council on the status of trip reduction programs.

The Survey information also may be used to facilitate trip reduction programs as follows:

1. Business owners and/or their employees may be provided with employee match lists to assist with the voluntary formation of carpools.
2. Transit purveyors may be provided with information on geographic regions where large numbers of employees reside to assist in the establishment and promotion of effective transit routes.
3. Business owners and their employees who request transit passes may be provided with passes at volume discounts to the extent such discounts are offered by local transit purveyors and to the extent that such a bus pass request aggregation program can be coordinated by the City or by a recognized Transportation Management Association.

C. Trip Reduction Goals. The established trip reduction goals under this ordinance shall include compliance with at least one of the following targets:

1. An average vehicle ridership (AVR) of at least 1.35 for all vehicles entering the City.
2. A drive alone rate of not more than 60% for all vehicles entering the City.
3. A total annual reduction in the number of trips per capita per year of at least 1.6%.

Section Two. Add Section 17.34.110 as follows:

17.34.100 Employee Carpool Incentive Program.

Business owners and their employees may apply for and register employee carpools with the City and receive a discount card for each member of each carpool registered. Applications for registration shall be processed in the order received and discount cards may be issued up to the maximum number authorized by Resolution of the City Council. A valid, current discount card shall entitle the bearer to park at no fee during normal hours of operation in any Municipal Parking lot containing fifty (50) or more parking spaces which is operated as a non-reserved, fee parking lot open to the general public as long as unfilled parking spaces reserved for such purposes remain available. The card also shall entitle the bearer to park within spaces reserved for carpool parking at the Vista Lobos parking facility. To use the discount card, the employee must be driving a motor vehicle to work in Carmel-by-the-Sea, must be transporting at least one other employee with a valid, current discount card who works in Carmel-by-the-Sea, and must present all discount cards carried by all employees in the vehicle to the parking attendant to allow recording of each day of use.

Parking discount cards must be renewed annually. Parking discount cards that have a history of active use shall receive priority for renewal over the issuance of discount cards to new carpools. Active use shall be demonstrated by recorded use of a card on at least 12 days per month for at least four hours on each qualifying day of use. If the demand for discount cards exceeds the supply made available by resolution of the City Council, discount cards already issued to employees that have failed to maintain active use for two consecutive months may be cancelled and reissued to applicants requesting formation of a new registered carpool.

Section Three. Add Section 17.34.120 as follows:

17.34.120 Visitor Trip Reduction

Each motel, hotel, R-I motel and lodging facility shall provide a current copy of the Monterey-Salinas Transit schedule in each transient unit or at a convenient, visible display location within the business premises to encourage transit use by visitors. If a specialized visitor or other local transit service becomes available through action by the City or other public agency, information on such service from the transit provider also shall be included.

Section Four. Add Section 17.34.130 as follows:

17.34.130 Facilities for Trip Reduction

A. Purpose. The purpose of this section is to ensure that in new development, redevelopment and expansion of existing development, the infrastructure needed to encourage a reduction in vehicle trips is incorporated into project design.

B. Applicability. The provisions of this Section shall apply to all subdivisions, commercial developments and all residential developments for which discretionary action is taken after the effective date of this ordinance.

C. Residential Projects. Any application for the construction or reconstruction of more than three but less than 20 residential dwellings shall incorporate all of the following into the project design or project specifications:

- o Install bicycle amenities including bicycle racks or bicycle storage lockers and grade level or ramped bicycle pathway connections with the City street(s) near the project.
- o Provide an information package on ridesharing, public transportation and nearby licensed childcare facilities to tenants/buyers as part of move-in materials.
- o Provide attractive and convenient pedestrian facilities to link each project unit and common areas to the pedestrian circulation system of the City. If a transit stop is located near the project, pedestrian circulation also shall be linked to the transit stop.

In addition to the requirements above, the following trip reduction facilities/elements shall be incorporated into all projects of 20 or more dwelling units:

- o At least one resource or site amenity that could reduce vehicular trip making. For example, equipping residential units with laundry facilities or providing a group laundry facility could be incorporated to reduce trips. Providing on-site child care or provisions for telecommuting are other examples of trip reducing amenities. Applicants are encouraged to suggest other alternatives.
- o Coordinate with the local purveyor(s) of public transit services and provide bus pull-outs, transit stops, transit shelters or similar amenities as determined to be necessary by both the transit purveyor and the City using current published design standards for the improvements.
- o Provide a cash payment to support local transit services of trip reduction activities.

D. Commercial Projects. Any application for the construction or reconstruction of more than 5,000 square feet of commercial floor area shall incorporate all of the following into the project design or specifications:

- o Provide information on ridesharing, public transportation and nearby child care facilities to employees as part of orientation materials.
- o Install bicycle racks or lockers and a shower facility to encourage bicycle commuting of employees.

In addition to the requirements above, all projects involving the construction or reconstruction of more than 10,000 square feet of commercial floor area shall incorporate at least two (2) of the following trip reduction elements into the design or project specifications. The selection of which of these elements to include shall require approval of the Planning Commission based on the specific project characteristics.

- o Provide on-site daycare for employees and customers.
- o Provide on-site banking ATMs and/or direct deposit of paychecks.
- o Coordinate with the local purveyor(s) of public transit service and provide bus pull-outs, transit stops, transit shelters or similar amenities as determined to be necessary by both the transit purveyor and the City.
- o Provide preferential parking for employees who carpool consistent with Section 65088.1 of the California Government Code.
- o Provide a parking cash out program for employees.

- o Provide facilities for telecommuting.
- o Provide a cash payment to support local transit services or trip reduction activities.

Section Five. Violations. Any person, firm or corporation, whether as principal or agent, employed or otherwise, violating or causing or permitting the violation of the provisions of this ordinance is guilty of an infraction. Should any person, firm or corporation violate the terms of this ordinance and any action is authorized by the City Council or the City Attorney or is in fact filed for said violations, no other action shall be taken on any application related to this project or property filed by or on behalf of said person, firm or corporation until the litigation has been resolved.

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

by John Saar, Broker

We Listen to What You Don't Say!

Some of our buyers purchase homes that look exactly like the home they said they wanted and are in the neighborhood for which they expressed a strong preference. Others surprise us by falling in love with a house the complete opposite of what they told us they wanted.

Good agents listen carefully as buyers describe needs and preferences. We sift through the current inventory to come up with possible matches. Because there is almost always some compromise involved, we often suggest alternatives that might work. If, for example, you prefer a specific neighborhood where no homes are for sale in your price range, we may suggest others that feature many of the same amenities. If you say you want four bedrooms, and we understand you want to use one as a home office, we may show you a home with a first floor den that would serve the same purpose. As you look at houses, remember that feedback is important to us. You can say anything, and remember that it won't hurt our feelings if you say you don't like a house.

Monterey Pony League hosts 1993 Bronco World Series

By JOHN DETRO

THIS YEAR'S Bronco League World Series will be hosted by Monterey Pony Baseball at Jacks Ballpark in Monterey.

Dates given by Bronco League overseer Betsy Rosenthal: Thursday, Aug. 12, through Wednesday, Aug. 18.

"This tournament will bring together eight teams of 11 and 12 year olds," she says. "These squads will represent four United States zones (North, South, East, West) along with one team from the Caribbean Zone, one from the Asian/Pacific Zone and two from the Monterey Peninsula (one from Monterey and the other the winner of the Seaside area)."

At this writing, the roster of competitors still was being finalized.

"The World Series will bring many visitors from around the country and the globe," Rosenthal adds. "And it will provide a rare opportunity for everyone to view the highest caliber of youth baseball."

Mayor as hurler

Opening ceremonies will be held before the first game at 5 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 12. The National Anthem will be sung by Monterey's Rachel Marotta, and the first pitch will be thrown by Mayor Dan Albert.

The fairgrounds kick-off luncheon will start at 11:30 a.m. that same date. Guest speaker will be a Hall of Fame umpire — Doug Harvey.

"This event is open to the public at a cost of $20 per ticket," says spokesperson Dorothy Bentley. "There will be a few tickets available at the door."

Season tickets for the week are being sold at Winners Batting Cages on the fairgrounds and at Cages, 414 Adams St., Monterey (across from Jacks Park). These cost $20 (adults) and $10 (youngsters five to 14 years).

Daily tickets will be available at the gate ($5 and $2). Information: 646-8637.

"Monterey Parks and Recreation supports this event," says Mike Ventimiglia of Bronco League World Series. "We're all working to offer a first-class situation. It will help the local economy as business continues to feel the impacts caused by the closing of Fort Ord and state (budget) cutbacks."

MONTEREY OPERA Association (MOA) will be spotlighted at 2 p.m. on Aug. 15 as the free Sunday Afternoon Concert Series again holds forth at Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater.

The summer programs have been presented since mid-July by Sunset Center.

MOA's Peter and Karole Lewis will draw from Broadway musicals (1910 until today). Represented will be such composers as Victor Herbert, Sigmund Romberg, Rudolf Friml.

Meanwhile, Sunset Center staffers note that the Third Annual Garden Party will be held on Sunday, Sept. 12, at La Playa Hotel to benefit the Festival of Firsts Playwriting Competition. Cost: $15 per.

Promised are summer foods, wines, juices, entertainment, seminars for the home gardener. Details may be obtained by calling the hotel (624-6476).

THE PINK Rose Cafe at Pacific Meadows in Carmel Valley continues its Sunday Afternoon Concert Series with the Bohemian String Quartet on Aug. 15.

These concerts run from 2 until 4 p.m. and feature a cheese and fruit buffet. (Those who enjoy wine are invited to bring their own.)

For reservations and additional details, contact Jillian Stone at 624-9355.

A WORKSHOP combining an audiotape entitled Jungian Past Life Therapy and the book Other Lives, Other Selves — both by Jungian analyst Roger Woolger — is announced by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of Jung.

It's scheduled from 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 13, at the group's offices — 284 Foam St. in Monterey.

"Participants will learn how Jung's concept of the collective unconscious provides a basis for interpreting 'past life' episodes," the announcement says. "The tape is a live unrehearsed session in which we hear how past life regressions are elicited and how their meanings may be reflected in the individual's world of today."

There will be ample time for questions and discussion. Limited space makes prior registration necessary. "A modest donation is suggested; call 649-4018 to get details."

Also, preliminary registration, instructions and distribution of materials for a seminar — Discover Your Psychological Type — will be held in the same quarters starting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17.

LUZ VI Minda Lions Club plans another Tea Dance from 4:30 until 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 15, at the Doubletree Hotel. As always, proceeds will benefit the Blind and Visually Impaired Service Center of Monterey County.

Playing for the occasion will be the Moonlighters Band. Donation: $8. Ed Stone will offer free dance lessons at 4 p.m.

HALF A hundred of his songs recently were collected and published in a book from The Folk Project of New Jersey.

Singer and songsmith Bob Franke will perform on Thursday evening, Aug. 19, at Pacific Grove's Portofino Cafe. Tickets ($8 apiece) will be available at the door. Reservations: 373-7379.

"Bob's a true artist," British critic Tony May wrote, "and he'll dig things out of your heart you didn't know were still there."

The fifth Franke album — In This Night — was released by Flying Fish Records. A very good label indeed.

AND ACROSS the bay in Santa Cruz—

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 14, the Society of Abidance in Truth will offer a program of Hindustani bhajans by award-winning vocalist Asha Ramesh.

"These ancient and sacred sounds have for centuries led listeners into states of mystical rapture," says Society spokesperson Bob Haber. "The singer will be accompanied by superb musicians."

The event will occur at the Society's temple — 1834 Ocean St. at the junction of Graham Hill Rd. Tickets cost $7 and $5 (seniors, students). Information: 425-0328 or 425-7287.

Additionally, Jan and Dean (they helped make "the California sound" a household term) will bring surf music to Santa Cruz Beach Boardwalk's free summer concert series will two shows on Friday, Aug. 13. Shows will start at 7 p.m. and 90 minutes later.

THERE'S STILL time, but hurry. Monterey Bay Aquarium's special exhibit — Planet of the Jellies — will close on Sept. 7. Those, of course, are the graceful and mysterious jellyfish.
